Writing in pen and ink the year before his untimely death at age 64, Calestous Juma sought to illuminate the personal path he took and to encourage others to make their own. He was always an influencer (what else would you call someone with over 100,000 Twitter followers?) long before the term became common currency. Whether as a science teacher, journalist, scholar, or policy pioneer, he sought to bring knowledge and vision to the hard work of making development sustainable.

In this very personal account, Juma takes us from his childhood in a fishing town on the shores of Lake Victoria, through his adventures in journalism, to his intellectual growth and emergence in the corridors of power in national and international environmental policymaking and academia. His trademark humor and sharing of political cartoons opened the door to frank exchanges and too many partnerships to count.

A Saint to Behold with Rev. Philip Kinyinga M'Inoti / Engineer Kiruki Mwithimbu & Kimathi Kinyinga Meru: Eureka Publishers, 2023
xiv, 204p.

Includes Index; Bibliography

$ 55.00 / PB

A Saint to Behold is the story of the birth and growth of the Methodist Church in Meru captured through the life history of Rev Philip Kinyinga M'Inoti. He was born around the turn of the 19th century, joined the Kaaga Mission in his teen age and survived death as the mission was burnt down by infuriated Miiru warriors in 1914.

As Kenya was raided and subdued by the British Empire, many things were happening that threatened to upset the sanctity of the traditional society - even as the newly arrived Christians made room for themselves. As the two rival forces clashed, the proverbial grass was trampled down, culminating in the open warfare that was to be the Mau Mau rebellion. From the story, it is clear that the Mau Mau uprising was not only a battle for land, but also a divine fight for our souls! Philip M'Inoti lived through this period of transformation. He was, indeed, a member of the cast that played a key role in the ensuing transition. He found himself a confidant of both sides of the divide; a Reverend on one side, and a Njurincheke Elder, on the other. By telling his story, the book captures the authentic account of this transformation through the pen of a master storyteller. The book also rekindles the true African spirit of family as M'Inoti's genealogy is traced 200 years back to Igembe, the eastern slopes of the Nyambene Hills. The dispersal that followed was like the legendary mustard seed that dies to regenerate a forest.

What started as an eight-month assignment turned into a six-year adventure and the creation of a social business to help Kenya's farmers lift themselves out of poverty. The social business, Juhudi Kilimo, provides microloans to enable smallholder farmers to buy productive assets, such as cows, tools and so on. Since its foundation in 2009, Juhudi Kilimo has provided over 50,000 loans worth $30 million and financed the purchase of 23,100 cows by some of Kenya's poorest farmers. In its six years Juhudi managed to rack up an impressive list of international investors - The Rockefeller Foundation, The Ford Foundation, Acumen Fund, Soros Economic Development Fund, Grameen Foundation, Deutsche Bank and Kiva.org. The company also won a Charles Schwab Social Entrepreneur of the Year Award and part of CIO Magazine's top 100 list. The challenges faced by the company in its early years reveal a dark underbelly of investor greed, corruption and the deep multicultural misunderstandings that can lead to conflicts. The company was driven by a young entrepreneur from the US, who admits he had no idea what he was doing but learned along the way. The lessons he presents here can help guide those starting new ventures or trying to defy the odds with a new social business in East Africa. The business stories are intertwined with his adventures, racing camels, running from rhinos and much more.

This book serves as a reference to an abundance of flowers from Kenya, my home. I started hand colouring black and white prints and eventually fell in love with colour. I was using slide film when I realised the fleeting beauty of nature and plants. When the digital era exploded, I was seldom seen without a camera, focusing on flowers and plants. These days, in my eighties, I am still focusing on the plant world but for convenience I mainly use an iPhone. The images are mostly from my garden and the immediate neighbourhood. I hope you gain as much enjoyment looking at the pictures in this book as I did creating it.

Why is Kenya experiencing continued poverty, inequality, and unemployment when statistics report that it is becoming a middle-income country with a steadily growing economy?

Thomas Kibua addresses the economic stagnation as evidenced by an unhappy citizenry shrouded in hopelessness. He points to endemic corruption, international meddling, inappropriate domestic power structures, and desperation among citizens as key drivers of the status quo and calls on lawmakers and citizens alike for transformational reform.

To avoid becoming a failed state, Kenya must overhaul its economic governance and management systems to ensure equitable ownership of resources, fairness and justice in resource distribution.

Kenya also needs an engaged public that elects truly honest leaders with a vision of the country as one where everyone thrives.

Education

Juakalisation of the Education System in Kenya / Samuel Agonda Ochola

Bungoma: Intercen Books Publishing Company, 2022

xiv, 314p.

9789914999044

$ 35.00 / PB

Once in a while, a book that defines a subject, a sector or even an age emerges. This creatively entitled book, Juakalisation of the Education System in Kenya, is such a book. In Juakalisation, the author provides both an astounding panoramic perspective and incisive analysis of Kenya's education sector. By providing a critical history of the education sector, the book systematically explains the state of Kenya's education system and suggests a roadmap to restorative innovation that would propel the sector in the 21st Century.

To a cursory reader, Juakalisation is an unrelenting indictment of Kenya's education system. To a more discerning audience, the narrative is a classic double entendre. Lurking just beneath the castigative tone that impeaches the pedestrianisation of the education system is a strong optimistic voice that points the way to the redemption of a sector that predicates the destiny of a nation. Juakalisation is a microcosmic mirror of what ails Third World education systems, especially in Africa. In this mirror is a collective reflection of sick Kiplingian six honest serving-men to be treated to cure Kenya's education sector - what needs to be treated, why it needs to be treated, when it must be treated, how it should be treated, where it is to be treated and who should provide the treatment. In a sentence, Juakalisation is an unapologetic tough love.

European capitalism and colonialism penetrated many parts of the world, with profound effects on pre-capitalist social formations in the affected societies. It is against this backdrop, that the pastoralist Maasai of East Africa found themselves transformed and deformed as they encountered the new system. Unlike many other societies, however, the Maasai have been represented as "conservative" and impervious to the transformational process.

This book provides a historical analysis of gender relations in the Maasai society. It identifies the transformational processes that have contributed to the changed position of pastoralists in general and that of Maasai women in particular, and assesses the implications of these transformations for the development of pastoral women and men.

The Other Side of Prison: The Role of the Women Left Behind / ABANTU for Development

Nairobi: ABANTU for Development, 2004

120p.
$ 25.00 / PB
282gm.

The Other Side of Prison (TOSOP): The Role of Women Left Behind is a project of ABANTU for Development in collaboration with AMKA-Space for Women's Creativity. The project has documented experiences of women in the fight for the second liberation and also highlighted women's leadership roles in defending their rights and those of their children or their spouses. The project arose from the fact that men who experienced detention, imprisonment or exiles have had their experiences documented but no women left behind has had her experience documented. This is despite the fact that these women were then ostracized by the society and had to carry a burden on their own when they most needed support. The book has documented the experience of such women who became engaged with the state as it pursued destruction of the men they had arrested. It also highlights the difficulties these women countered. The book documents the coping strategies that these women developed and ways in which they dealt with state officials. This brings to the core their political, diplomatic, communicative and negotiating skills.

Kenyan Student Airlifts to America 1959-1961: An Educational Journey / Robert F Stephens

What did it take to get hundreds of Kenyan students, thirsting for higher education, into US colleges in the late 1950s and early 1960s? It took perseverance, help from countless people, and the overwhelming desire of the students themselves. This is an engaging and insightful book about an important and ignored slice of history. When we think of vital historical airlifts, minds race back to the Berlin Airlift. Robert Stephens takes us to another American-sponsored airlift that brought a generation of future African leaders to American shores for higher education. This effort profoundly altered the lives of these men and women, the development of East African nations, and the perception of America. At a time when the world struggled to understand the value of 'soft' as opposed to military power, this book offers a valuable historical model. Set during the last days of colonialism in Kenya, the book documents the development of human talent that would foster a majority-ruled independent Kenya. Its focus on Africans ñ their individual and collective biographies, aspirations and intermittent assistance from the US and others - is the story.

This collection of papers explores the variegated ways that the continent's rich and complex history – precolonial, colonial and postcolonial – continues to impact and sometimes to haunt the lives of contemporary Africans and persons of African descent. The volume combines phenomenological approaches that consider the ways Africans experience historical memory alongside considerations of the ways in which past modalities of power continue to structure African realities.

Amb. Donald W. Kaniaru's work is a timely account of his professional engagement in international environmental law and diplomacy. The work, based on his rich experience gained through personal actions and observations, tells it as it was and immortalizes his contributions to the subject. From his membership of the UN General Assembly Ad-hoc Committee on the Sea Bed and Ocean Floor Beyond the Limits of National Jurisdiction to Head of Environmental Law Division at UNEP and, later, as Chair of Kenya's National Environment Tribunal. Amb. Kaniaru commands an unassailable lead in the subject. The substance of the work is both dignified and professional. I highly recommend it to academics, students, policy-makers, and all who have an interest in environmental law and diplomacy. – Francis D. P. Situma, Ph.D. Professor of International Law. This book provides the courts with guidance when determining when to admit 'friend of the court' or 'amicus curiae' petitioners and when to seek out amicus participation of their own initiative. The publication considers the prevailing legal framework together with case law and illustrations from comparative jurisdictions to allow for a better understanding of amicus and ensure more consistent and efficient determinations of who should be allowed to participate as amicus in Kenya. Thematically, it explores electoral dispute resolution, gender, economic and social rights, and environment law, with comparative perspectives on the practice in South Africa, Canada, India and others. The publication was jointly developed by the International Development Law Organization (IDLO), the Kenya Judiciary Training Institute (JTI), the National Council on the Administration of Justice (NCAJ), the Public International Law & Policy Group (PILPG), Equality Now, the Solidarity for African Women's Rights (SOAWR) Coalition, Kenyans for Peace with Truth and Justice, the Kenyan Section of the International Commission of Jurists (ICJ), and the Katiba Institute.

As the world faces a plethora of turmoil from conflicts, civil war, and other calamities, causing people to flee for their lives, the homeless and vulnerable persons from Syria, Libya, Palestine and many sub-Saharan African countries seek a haven for their survival.

Migrant minors separated from their immediate family members during these perilous journeys are susceptible to danger, are at risk of child trafficking, and are faced with immigration restrictions at the border of every country they run into.

Thus, Italy's new legislation, The Zampa Law for 'Provision of Protection Measures', is a boon to the children fleeing for their lives without being accompanied by any family or guardian into Italy.

The author analyses the gap that the new Italian Zampa Law filled, the challenges in applying the new law and other aspects of the Italian immigration system related to unaccompanied migrant minors.

Faith-Based Access to Justice in Kenya: Approaches to Dispute Resolution Between Believers / Henry K. Murigi

Is there none wise among you to resolve the dispute?" Paul asks. This book introduces a good and healthy debate on real life issues involving believers. Conflicts are a true reflection that human beings (including believers), are being authentic in expressing their honest views about their interactions. Unmanaged, they may lead to violence but when properly managed, they certainly lead to peace, harmonious existence and reflect on the faith believers profess. In this book, Henry K. Murigi empowers believers to manage dispute in a Christian way thereby: • Avoid bringing disrepute to the name of Christ • Avoid open confrontation which is not healthy. • Use Biblical guidance and not resort to Courts. This practice of using standards prescribed in the Scriptures to resolving disputes has the potential to entrench the name of Christ in most if not all spheres of the Christian experience. The book is relevant for Lawyers, Pastors, Church Leaders, Alternative Dispute Resolution (ADR) Practitioners, Scholars, Theologians and Believers in general.

With intrigue, love, lust, fame, greed, and cruelty, 'With Eyes Wide Closed' Novel explores two modern relationships of once-loving couples now embroiled in a toxic row. The race to the bottom is on, with their eyes wide closed. It will soon be over, and the grand award ceremony for the biggest losers will kick off. How do people who were like two peas in a pond are now hell-bent on ruining each other? Contrary to what novels and movies often depict, nobody is pure evil. Our best intentions, love, needs, fears, wants, and circumstances can veer us into unexpected paths. This could be a big blunder we've made or several small wrong choices over a while. The author takes a bruising, no-holds-barred approach in narrating the nitty-gritty of tumultuous relationships – from affectionate pillow talks to traversing through one of the most intimate things lovers do – FIGHTING! The novel is based on true events that have been dramatized for the kicks and giggles. It might hit too close to home for some and be an eye-opener about our interactions with the people we love.

Sunset in the Savannah is a story of great determination and resilience. It is the story of Lesalon whose father is reluctant to enroll him in school. The government had decreed that all boys of school going age must be taken to school. Though his traditionalist father, Ole Malit eventually agrees, it is with a heavy heart and is never completely sold out to the idea.

The story follows Lesalon's journey from primary school through to university. It is a story of great adventure in the backdrop of traditional community life. One thing remains consistent; the determination to achieve one's life dreams in the midst of great challenges. The author weaves the story in an interesting manner that makes it very captivating to the reader.

Chain Reaction is a follow up book of Project Cross: Lessons From Living For Self To Living For Christ and deals with the different stages and seasons we go through as Christians right from the second we finish the prayer of repentance. With Biblical reference, Chain Reaction explains the repercussions of the disease that is sin, the cure that came on the cross and the freedom as a result thereof. Chain Reaction offers practical tips on how to press on in a new relationship with Christ and covers some of the mental, spiritual, social and emotional struggles that come with a new life in Christ that we are often plagued with. With personal testimonies and 'prison' tales, Maria Mmari vulnerably and authentically throughout stays true to the central theme of chains, imprisonment and uses this as an allegory for the spiritual life and how we react to the newfound freedom in Christ.

Western civilisation has influenced African heritage and culture, leading to the death of critical African values that constitute essential pillars of social order. The modern African man grapples with the daily challenges of finding his true masculine identity. While exposing the immorality and un-African ways of modern life, Olago seeks to guide the African man back to his masculinity in The Weakening of the African Man. He does not shy away from exposing the truths about feminism, Gay relationships and the effects of the modern-day slavery that has seen African countries stooping low at the expense of their morality and culture. Olago offers a straight-ahead solution to building the masculine frame while revisiting the ways of the traditional African man.

What is the masculine frame? What are the kinds of beliefs, habits and mindsets that emasculate men? What is it that is stopping men from leading purposeful, prosperous lives characterized by healthy, fulfilling relationships and families?

What are some cold, hard truths men must embrace to forge the psychological infrastructure that can make them obtain financial success, navigate relationships and become fulfilled people in the new social order?

Why do men value respect from their women so much, and how do men get that respect and maintain it? Many 'woke' women today say that marriage is slavery. Is it? And is it slavery to men or to women?

Why is it that in 2021, when a mine collapsed on Tom Okwach, the government called off the rescue operation on the fourth day, saying they had run out of fuel, leaving him to die? Yet, the same government marshalled all resources, including foreign governments, for thirteen days to retrieve the body of a woman who had slipped from a ferry in Likoni and fell in the Indian Ocean? Why the uneven treatment?

Why the uneven treatment?

What does it say about the value of a man's life today?

Can a man harness his sexual energy to pursue higher goals and experience higher levels of consciousness?

We look at all these questions plus more as we plumb the depths of manhood, provide men with tools for managing modern relationships, and ground themselves solidly in an increasingly gynocentric world that regards masculinity as toxic and encourages men to be compliant to the feminine imperatives and suppress their masculine instincts.

UNPLUGGED II is about unplugging men from beliefs that emasculate them and setting them firmly on the path of advancing relentlessly to become full-stack, purposeful, prosperous men of steel.

Nairobi: Ndiko Aliet, 2023

$ 30.00 / PB

344gm.

The ancient Greek Philosopher Plato said we were once conjoined and very happy. But Zeus split us into male and female to punish us for our egoism, leaving us forever looking for our other half. This soulmate myth has been used to advertise the finding of true love as a matter of destiny, and many novels and movies have been developed from this belief. Overpriced honeymoons, diamond rings, and other excessive accoutrements of romanticism have been developed from this myth, alongside cases of homicide when the expectations of the beloved are violated.

The Bible says in Genesis that God created woman to be a helper of man. Is female nature reflective of this, or was this a romantic fantasy fabricated by patriarchy to subjugate women into submitting to men? If pressure is meant for the shoulders, not for the hips, can hips help the shoulders?

Across many animals, including octopuses, some species of pythons, and the praying mantis, the female kills and often eats the male after mating. When circumstances force the man to depend on his wife for survival for a long time, does the wife support him or discard him?

With all the patriarchal structures removed and the modern woman empowered to do as she wishes, how does she handle relationships and her place in society? Why are women filing for divorce 70-80% of the time, and why does this rate go close to 90% when the woman is educated and has a career? Why does divorce have an appeal for the modern woman? Polled Gen Z women (born 1995-2012) rank marriage as their 7th priority behind travel, a career, buying a house, financial independence, etc. What does this portend for the institution of marriage?

In the face of unfettered female nature, we look at how women handle relationships, leadership, submission, money, and parenting. We delve into how competition anxiety affects fertility and desire in women.

The hot-button topic of single motherhood is tackled unflinchingly alongside the sins of the mothers and how, despite their best intentions, women raise weak men.

This book shines the light on the dark aspects of female nature and modern women in a manner not done before. It gets uncomfortable along the process, but we shrug off the discomfort, clinically excavate the features and lay them bare.

Amplifying Survivor Voices: Interviews with Survivors of Gender Based Violence in Kenya / Equality Now

268gm.

Over the past twenty-nine years of Equality Now's quest to realize a just world for women and girls, it has been critical for us to ensure the voices of women and girls are at the center of our work.

As we adapt to this unique time of the COVID pandemic, a quarter of a century after the groundbreaking Fourth World Conference on Women in Beijing, and against the backdrop of the Generation Equality Forum, we, in partnership with several other local women's rights organizations, sought the voices of survivors of sexual and gender-based violence, to understand their reality and specifically their experiences as they sought to access justice.

The stories that we heard painted a picture of two common themes we know to be true. Firstly, Kenya has robust laws that should prevent, protect and respond to sexual and gender-based violence; And secondly, critical gaps in the justice sector prevent the effective implementation of those laws. Worse still pervasive socioeconomic factors continue to be a catalyst for sexual exploitation as well as child and teenage pregnancies.
