Anthropology

San Rock Art / J.D. Lewis-Williams
Johannesburg, South Africa : Jacana Media, 2011
157p.;
ISBN 9781431401000
$ 12.50

Rock paintings by the San Bushmen are scattered over all of southern Africa; it is estimated that some 15,000 rock art sites are known and possibly as many await discovery. While providing information about the history of these fascinating paintings--considered one of the greatest cultural treasures of humankind--this account also offers insight into their possible interpretations by taking the magnificent Linton panel in the Iziko South African Museum in Cape Town as a starting point. Filled with beautiful illustrations, this record sheds light on San rock art in general and makes sense of the baffling complexity and strangeness of the art form.

'We remember differently' Race, memory, imagination / JYOTI MISTRY & JORDACHE A. ELLAPEN

Pretoria, South Africa : UNISA Press, 2012

202p.;

ISBN 9781868886937

$ 24.50

Using the short film we remember differently (2005) as a focal point, this collection of essays addresses the conditions of cultural production in post-apartheid South Africa. Art practice in an apartheid context was strongly motivated as 'struggle art'; but in an environment more consciously informed – by revisiting history and excavating the past – the imagination must feature strongly to exercise the breath of freedom made possible in a democratic South Africa. This invitation 'to imagine' is not free from the context of history and it is the central aspect of rethinking history that informs the making of the film. Each of the creative contributors in the making of the film reflects on the creative process and how history and memory informs their creative choices.

The book also steps away from the reflexive process of producing the film as described by the cultural collaborators and shifts the focus to also address issues of reception and interpretation of the film. In offering analysis these commentators describe how the imagination is still at work in hermeneutic processes but always subject to history and memory.

Johannesburg, South Africa : The Penguin Group (SA), 2013

143p.;

"Taken Captive By Birds "is a collection of Marguerite Poland's 'discovery' of birds as a child and the role they have played in her and her family's life. Interwoven with the personal story are the myths, traditions and meanings behind birds and their names within Zulu and Xhosa culture. The book is divided into 18 chapters, each of which loosely deals with one particular bird or, sometimes, a grouping of birds. Beautifully illustrated by Craig Ivor van Vuuren, this collaboration promises to become one of the classic South African publications.

405p.;

ISBN 9780143530343

Thinking up a Hurricane is the unique coming of age memoir of Martinique Stilwell's recounting of her true life gypsy childhood. It is poignant and funny and heartbreaking all at the same time. With the wisdom and innocence of a child's point of view, it is a powerful yet tender story of physical and emotional adversity, of family dysfunction and the ties that bind, and of the shackles and exhilarating freedom of growing up different.

After an unexpected request from his father, Henry Knott returns to the Karoo farm on which he spent a fractured childhood. Painful memories force him to revisit a tragedy in which he was fatefully implicated.

Henry has to come to terms with how this event has shaped his adult life, his marriage and the conflicted emotions he feels towards the place of his birth.

The Land Within traces the deep connections between tragedy and love, regret and longing.

Medicine and the Politics of Knowledge situates South Africa - including its history of stances and political formations around HIV/AIDS—in the broader context of questions relating to science, medicine, human experimentation, and structural violence, all of which shape the cases in the book. Putting South Africa in the context of other cases of contention and contestation about science and medicine in India, Latin America and China helps us to understand the particular history of the South African case itself.

People often wear their causes on their t-shirts, in their choice of traditional attire or other garments, or by way of specific costumes, pieces of jewellery or particular accessories. In Was it something I wore? Dress; identity; materiality, the contributors explore the construction and performance of personal and social identities. The essays point to the significance of dress as material culture in social science research not only in their content but also in their focus on a variety of methodologies including memory work, visual studies, autoethnography, object biographies and other forms of textual analysis.

ISBN 9781431404759

$ 30.00

A complex, open-eyed book that grapples with some of South Africa's most urgent social problems as they are refracted through one appalling, frustrating, inspiring place – the Central Methodist Church in downtown Johannesburg. How did a place of worship turn into a shelter for thousands of refugees? Where did they come from? Why are they still there? Kuljian fluently combines interviews with members of the refugee community and key figures like Bishop Paul Verryn with an understanding of urban dynamics, migrancy, and national and regional politics.

After We Said Goodbye / Sean Davison

Johannesburg, South Africa : The Penguin Group (SA), 2013

296p.;

ISBN 9780143530572

$ 23.75

Sean Davison, a professor of science at the University of the Western Cape, made headlines when he was arrested in New Zealand for matricide. The story that emerged--how he helped his ailing mother in Dunedin die--is the subject of his affecting book "Before We Say Good-Bye." This second book, "After We Said Good-Bye, " takes up the story from there: his arrest, trial and sentencing to 5 months of house arrest. The dramatic events that followed after this soft-spoken, unassuming man took the most fateful decision of his life, tore open family rifts and posed fundamental questions about life and about his choices. With unwavering frankness, Davison faces his demons: Should he have done what he did? Ought he to have exposed his family? Was it the right thing to self-sensor his book and conceal the fact that he had administered the morphine? And how should he come to terms with his sibling who had leaked the uncensored manuscript that led to his arrest? It is estimated that huge numbers of people die through assisted suicide, and Davison has become a vocal activist for the right to die in dignity.

Hard Words On HIV / AIDS Communication / Colin Tinei Chasi

Johannesburg, South Africa : Real African Publishers, 2011

88p.;

ISBN 9781920222499

$ 22.50

Hard Words is an existential read, which challenges the idea that Africans are collectivists first and people after. It brings the reader a new framework for understanding HIV / AIDS from an experiential perspective and is one of the few books that, instead of looking at the urgency of communicating the facts about HIV / AIDS, challenges the idea that there is a deficit of communication. It rather suggests a dialogue about the communication itself and how to improve that by looking deeper into the issues of experience, of being human, of dignity, respect and recognition.
