This book is a rendition of the history of the Ndebele institution of chiefs, in the heyday of the Ndebele state, during the colonial period and in the post-independence period. Emphasis is given, in particular, to the succession rules and the worldview and cosmological underpinnings that gave rise to the succession rules and procedures. Chiefs are part of the traditional leadership which has survived into the present, albeit with modifications in line with the changing border political climate. Within the context of a bifurcated state, the hereditary institution coexists with modern democratic and elective institutions. While in the long term the institution may become obsolete or undergo radical transformation, in the present it is a reality. Succession wrangles have characterized the institution and this book seeks to illuminate the rules that have attended the Ndebele chieftainship.

Biography

Garfield Todd : The End of the Liberal Dream in Rhodesia / Susan Woodhouse

Harare: Weaver Press, 2018

xlii, 566p.

990gm.

Prime minister Garfield Todd of Southern Rhodesia became known outside the country in January 1958 when his Cabinet rebelled and resigned. Within the country, the wonder was that he became Prime Minister in the first place.

Todd personified the failed liberal dream in Africa after the Second World War when Britain was in the process of dismantling her empire and attempting to create a multi-cultural show-piece in Central Africa – the Federation of Rhodesia and Nyasaland – which would form a British-influenced economic and political entity that effectively separated an encroaching Marxist-influenced black nationalism in the north from an equally militant form of white Afrikaner nationalism emanating from South Africa, particularly after the establishment of apartheid, the Nazi-inspired system of racial segregation, in 1948. The failure of Todd, and the European liberals who supported him, cleared the decks for what they most feared: a head-on racial collision that cost at least 35,000 lives during the war of liberation between the years 1972 and 1979.

This book traces the development, triumph and failure of the man who unexpectedly found himself at the centre of political life in Southern Rhodesia, during the explosive years of 1953 to 1958. Todd was born in New Zealand and sent to Southern Rhodesia in 1934 by the Churches of Christ to take over their small mission station near Shabani in Matabeleland. Having built this up into a thriving centre of a wide circle of churches and schools, Todd entered Parliament in 1946 in Sir Godfrey Huggins' United Party. Here he established a reputation as a sound, intelligent M.P. and a fine speaker.

Todd's missionary years formed the foundation of his premiership, the basis of his close relationship with blacks (including many who would become leaders of their people), and his understanding of their difficulties, frustrations and growing ambitions. When Todd was ousted from the premiership he continued his increasingly desperate attempts to persuade the whites that their only hope for the future lay in co-operating with black nationalism. He was so vilified by them that he withdrew entirely from formal politics – but he still did what he could – writing, speaking, lobbying influential people in Britain and the USA – to avert the inevitable disaster. He was arrested three times (once on a capital charge); restricted to his ranch twice, for a total of five-and-a-half years; and imprisoned in solitary confinement for six weeks; but never charged or tried in a court of law. At Independence, he served as a Senator for five years.

Man in the Middle : A Memoir / Father Fidelis Mukonori S.J.
Harare: The House of Books, 2017
312p.
9780797479739
$ 50.00 / PB
406gm.

Jesuit Father, Fidelis Mukonori, was a key player in Robert Mugabe's fall from power in Zimbabwe. Although he has his critics, he has played an important role in the politics of Zimbabwe for four decades. He was involved in the struggle for his country's freedom, convincing exiles like Mugabe that the only way to end the Rhodesian Bus War was through a negotiated settlement. After liberation he continued to work for justice and spent a lot of time trying to resolve the issue of land in Zimbabwe. His memoirs reveal a history that is largely unknown. Mukonori was part of and witnessed a number of very important moments in the country's history – Mugabe's fall being the latest. The Jesuit has witnessed and participated in the way Zimbabwe's story has unfolded in the last 40 years.

In Pursuit of Freedom and Justice : A Memoir / Cephas G. Msipa

Harare: Weaver Press, 2015 (Reprint 2016)

xiv, 186p.

9781779222824

$ 45.00 / PB

248gm.

"As I look back, I am happy that I have lived for so long". It is a happiness shared by many: family members, friends and colleagues. Cephas Msipa's memoirs take us back to his birth in Zvishavane in 1931, and they reflect a life dedicated to the welfare of others and the development of his country. Following secondary education at Dadaya Mission, he worked as a teacher in Zvishavane and Kwekwe, where he was active in the Rhodesian African Teachers Association, before moving to Harare in 1958. It was a time of rising nationalism in the capital, and following the banning of the African National Congress and its successor, the National Democratic Party, Msipa was a founding member of ZAPU, the Zimbabwean African People's Union. Thus began an engagement with national politics that would last until he was in his late seventies, furthering his education as a political detainee and, after independence had been won, serving as a deputy minister, minister and provincial governor. The narrative of his life follows the arc of Zimbabwe's history, and embraces the people and events that have shaped it. Beyond that, it is the story of a gentle, humorous, committed man who enjoyed a long and loving marriage and continues to fill his retirement with philanthropy and wide-ranging friendships.

Zimbabwe Agenda for Sustainable Socio-Economic Transformation Critical Perspectives and Debates in Public Policy is an attempt to discuss Zimbabwe's 2013-2018 blueprint plan in a bid to bring scholarship and policy implications that it has in terms the planning and implementation of it. The book is written in a bid to portray the ex-ante position of the plan. Epitomised in 12 chapter contributions by different authors of different backgrounds – political science, education, urban and regional planning, development advocacy, sociology and economics, the book embraces a somewhat trans-disciplinary approach to the topic at hand, "ZIMASSET". The subject ought to be embraced from various angles including the context of its launch, the spirit of its launcher, specifically the government of the Zimbabwe African National Union (Patriotic Front) (ZANU-PF), and environment for its operationalization. The environment has had its various internal and external challenges imposed on the part of the state as the chief implementer. The book acknowledges the pressure exerted by the international community on the country's leadership in the form of 'smart' and 'targeted' sanctions. It questions how, 'the sons of the soil' now dislocated from the country in the name of 'diasporans' can or could as assist in the building of their besieged nation, as it were. It does not ignore the internal deformities explained by lack of application of Unhu/Ubuntu to curb corrupt and decadent practices among those engaged in state and private enterprise. The book is thus a masterpiece of scholarship in so far as tries to look into issues that make or unmake the provisions in the blueprint in an unbiased manner.

History

This book is a tribute honouring Mwalimu Julius Kambarage Nyerere as a visionary of the African revolution, and an inspiration for freedom, unity and development. He speaks to us here with his wisdom through abstracts from his many statements and speeches and through his expressive body language and facial expressions in images that cover a period of more than 40 years, ranging from his village in Butiama to the world stage. He was a beacon of leadership against global imperialism at a time when the infrastructure to fight against tyranny through education, military training and diplomatic support was as scarce as freedom itself.

Sovereignty and self-determination, economic and agricultural independence, strong strategic and military alliances with neighbours and allies were just a few of the many lessons left by Mwalimu as his legacy to present and future generations. These are the pillars upon which independent African nations can construct a strong and stable, united house.

The 54 page report was published after the three organisations conducted a study in order to develop a better understanding of the variance between the police and legislative frameworks that govern pre-trial detention and the conditions in detention facilities in Zimbabwe and to provide concrete recommendations to improve the situation. It may help if the Zimbabwe Prisons and Correctional Services could take a moment to go through the publication and consider implementing some of the recommendations and help avoid mutinies within the country's rehabilitation centres.

Batsirai E. Chigama is a mesmeric performer whose generous and powerful poetry has been inspired by a range of influences. In this debut collection, she is at once deeply personal and passionately engaged in the political turmoil of her country. This selection of poems is about the slipperiness of truth, the weight of forgetting, but despite the pain of displacement Chigama finds heart in coming together, in gathering, in celebration. She does not force conclusions, or cover up contradictions. She trusts language and lets words play. And language rewards this trust.

Through a stroke of good fortune, a village girl, Olivia, is swept from her poverty stricken village into the city where her new guardians present opportunities to her so that she could aspire for a better life as a progressive, modern and educated woman. From a good foster child, a responsible elder sister and disciplined student, she steps into adulthood as a focused career woman, loyal friend, submissive and loving wife. But life is not played out in black and white. There are so many grey areas in between. In one stroke of fate, disaster strikes and Olivia tells her story from beyond the grave. In this riveting tale of a society run on harsh cultural dictates, pays homage to the women who lost their lives or emerged bruised and broken after fighting debilitating wars within the walls of their homes.

Beyond Appearances: Reflections on Principles and Practice is a collection of 121 articles written between 2005 and 2008 for The Zimbabwean. As the title suggests, David Harold Barry, SJ invites us to reflect upon our relationship with society. He asks repeatedly whether we should put ourselves or others, and what happens when we ignore the plight of those around us. We are also invited to reflect on the nature of power, our interaction with it, and our attitude towards it: do we gullibly agree to do what we're told without thinking, or do we reflect on the consequences of apathy and inaction. This is a book to keep beside your bed, a book with which to begin the day as a citizen of the world and an individual for whom every action matters.

This book brings together articles from different authors who have diverse experiences in peacebuilding. The discussions draw attention to the vital role of good governance in political structures and also note that the church has a prophetic role to play as she is invited to stewardship of herself and others in the concrete realization in history of God's will of abundant life for humans and for the entire cosmos. Further, the articles underline the importance of engaging the youth in social transformation processes while empowering them with the necessary skills for gainful employment. Political leadership and good governance ought to be grounded on sustainable economic structures, human rights, citizen participation, accountability, reconciliation and the love of God.

The late Welshman Hadane Mabhena, was a leading Zimbabwe African People's Union (ZAPU) activist, the political party led by Joshua Nkomo. He was among the pioneers of the liberation struggle in Nkayi and Matabeleland North. He faced incarceration in various prisons in Rhodesia. He was detained in Gonakudzingwa near the border with Mozambique. A loud and fearless voice for the voiceless, uMawelishi, as he was affectionately known among his colleagues and admirers, was declared a national hero when he passed on. While the focus of the book is on an individual, Welshman Mabhena, it also illuminates the times, both good and bad, that were an integral part of Welshman Mabhena's life.
