This detailed study of the architecture of Valentine Gunasekara provides valuable insights into the formation of a Ceylonese middle class, which was inspired by the post-independence desire for modernity. Their experiments, values and dynamic social history are the framework for this research.

This monograph documents a wide range of Gunasekara's projects including residential, religious and commercial buildings arguing that they represented a nascent cosmopolitanism from below that proved to be quite antithetical to regionalist trends in architecture.

This book describes how Sri Lanka's impressive biodiversity inventory was built, largely by a hodgepodge of amateurs and dilettantes motivated by curiosity and driven by a love of nature. It follows the progress of natural history up to the early post-Independence era, when growing nationalism and illusions of sovereignty, led to a distrust of 'western' systems – sadly, including science, and resulted in a sharp decline in exploration.

This book focuses on the Euro-Asian communities in South Asia composed of Burghers, Anglo-Indians and Eurasians, and their vanguard roles in the struggles for democratic rights in a colonial situation. Some were 'public intellectuals' who advocated worker and peasant rights, early radicalism, proto-nationalism, secularism and gender equality, many decades before the rise of those leaders now celebrated as 'national heroes'. The author argues that it was not Euro-Asian Marginality, but their centrality that was important, for they raised issues and agitated for reforms affecting the whole of society. This book brings these Euro-Asian pioneers and their contribution from the footnotes of history to the main text.
