Interweavings

A source book on Asean Crafts

FEditor : Victorino M.Manalo

Craft items have come to represent the countries and communities which created them. Thus, one will encounter much talk about the uniqueness of products, about their singular colors, designs and textures.

Craft objects are vessels of meaning. They are able to convey a lot of information especially as they travel from one region to another. The fact that many craft projects today are internationally traded and reach more geographically disparate audiences than before, adds more layers to their meanings .

The Development of Painting in Bali
Selections from the Neka Art Museum

Authors : Suteja Neka and Garett Kam

This book presents a richly illustrated introduction to the history of the major styles of Balinese painting. Individual essays examine some of the important characteristics unique to classical puppet figure works, transitional style paintings, and different regional developments of art found on the island. Other sections cover contemporary paintings by artists from Bali, other parts of Indonesia, and abroad. All of these styles are presented here as developments in the broader context of Indonesian art history.

Dare To Do

The Story of William Soeryadjaya and PT Astra International

Author : Charlotte Butler

The economic success of the "Asian tigers" in the 1990s was attributed to the efforts of ethnic Chinese entrepreneurs like William Soeryadjaya, Li Ka-Shing, Robert Kuok and many others who , starting out as traders with nothing, built up huge empires that came to dominate the regions's economy.

This book traces PT Astra's development from its origins and start up in the 1950s through its evolution until the mid 1970s, the process of restructuring it went through in the 1980s in preparation for going public, and then the "fall of the house of Soeryadjaya" in 1992 as, due to the collapse of his eldest son's business empire, William was forced to sell his controlling interest in Astra dsand Step down from the helm. The history of Astra following William's departure , and in particular during the economic crisis that hit the region during 1997-1999 and the subsequent political upheavals in Indonesia, is a unique account of one conglomerate's progress and serbacks during these stormy times.

Shadows on the Silver Screen
A Social History of Indonesian Film

Author : Salim Said

Shadows on the Silver Screen is the first comprehensive history of the Indonesian Cinema. Its publication begins to fill a major gap in Western film knowledge.

Of all the arts, film is the most political : it is the most responsive to the political climate and the most tempting target for political manipulation.

This book offers a critical look at the political and social forces which have shaped Indonesian film over the last sixty years.

Film Critics, historians, sociologists... All people interested in Contemporary Indonesian culture must read Shadows on the Silver Screen.

Labour Migration in Indonesia : Policies and Practice

Editors : Sukamdi, Abdul Haris, Patrick Brownlee

The Economic crisis that occurred as a consequence of the fall in the value of the domestic currency vis-à-vis the US dollar has the potential to deteriorate into a political crisis. The People's Consultative Assembly convening, which is certain to reelect Soeharto as the president for another term (7th), has major political implications for migrant workers expect quick solutions to the current crisis. If, after the ongoing consultative Assembly, President Soeharto and the new cabinet fail to control the crisis, the government will appear to have lost its legitimacy and credibility, and it may be impossible to avoid a serious political crisis. A

Simultaneous political and economics crisis creates a combination of "Push factors" which will force even larger numbers of migrants abroad than is the case today.

Economic Crisis in Indonesia
The Full Story
Author : Richard Mann

This study has been compiled monitoring media coverage of the economic crisis In Indonesia from England, Singapore, Malaysia, Australia and Indonesia itself. It is the story of how market forces sent Indonesia crashing on its face and it has been told by letting it tell itself, event by event. It will be of particular interest to non – Indonesians by being told largely from what I perceive to have happened within Indonesia. Throughout the crisis, Indonesian and foreign perceptions and reactions were widely different. What emerges is substantially different from the overall public impression of Indonesia's handling of the crisis and even of its causes.

Bantuan Likuiditas Bank Indonesia (Suatu Pelajaran Yang Sangat mahal bagi otoritas Moneter dan Perbankan)

Bank Indonesia Liquidity Support : An expensive lesson for the monetary authority and the banking sector

Authors : A. Tony Prasetyantono, Marcello Theodore

Bank Indonesia Liquidity Support abbreviated in Indonesian as BLBI is a popular topic of late. Initially intended as a means of Maintaining stability in the banking and payment systems, its effectiveness is now under serious question. Views on the subject have not been helped by the fact that comments from outside observers, as well as official statements by Bank Indonesia, have often been contradictory.

This book is written in response to the need to clearly understand the financial policies associated with BLBI. In preparing this text in cooperation with other institutions, CFPS hopes to present a comprehensive discussion the topic. In addition, ten legal issues associated with BLBI controversy are detailed. In doing so, CFPS seeks to present a clear and concise explanation of the causes and implications of liquidity support.

The Indonesian Environmental Almanac

A Joint Publication of the State Ministry for the Environment Republic of Indonesia with The Environmental Impact Management Agency and the Kalpa Willis Foundation

It has only been since the nation's third Five year Plan (Starting in 1979) that environmental management and development has been an issue in Indonesia. Thus it is still relatively new. Nevertheless, in a fairly short time Indonesia has already done a great deal to begin managing its environmental affairs. With the intention of displaying Indonesia's experience in environmental management, we bring this book, the Indonesian Environmental Almanac, to you. The original version of this book was published in Indonesian in September 1996. This English version contains additions and updates of data and information which we hope will make it more attractive and useful. The Indonesian Environmental Almanac invites the reader to enter into a dialogue on issue such as why we need to be concerned with the environment, who is responsible for environmental management, who we can contact to report instances of pollution, and what has already been done by the government, the private sector and communities about environmental management.

Sangiran : Man, Culture, and Environment in Pleistocene Times
Proceedings of the International Colloquium on Sangiran : Solo - Indonesia 21st - 24th September 1998

Editors : Truman Simanjuntak, Bagyo prasetyo, Retno Handini

Sangiran, on the island of Java in Indonesia, is one of very few early man sites in the world. Other sites are found only in some countries of Africa and Europe, beside India and China. Compare with other sites, Sangiran Possesses particular Characteristics : Firstly, it presents a sequences of layers from the Upper Pliocene through the Pleistocene, up to the recent age. These layers offer various important data for understanding of th past. Secondly, they are rich in archaeological remains. Sangiran has yielded about 60 individuals belonging to the homo erectus species, in a time span exceeding one million years. These finds constitute about 65% of all fossil man finds in Indonesia and more than half of all fossil man finds worldwide. The oldest stone tools founding Sangiran are about 800.000 years old. In fact, stone tools are scattered from the Grenzbank layer up to the surface. The animal remains are abundantly distributed from the lower Pleistocene to the upper layer. Thus, Sangiran is the most important site in the world to trace human settlement during the Pleistocene age. This unique context has convince UNESCO to enlist the site of Sangiran as part of the world heritage in 1996.

In a Jakarta Prison
Life Stories of Women Inmates

Author : Sujinah

Throughout the Soeharto regime, from 1965 until 1998, Indonesian Prose writing became increasingly vague and Obscure, Populated by Characters that Often bore little resemblance to real live, flesh – and-blood, people. This was especially true in the depiction of women. In a Jakarta Prison, presenting the life stories of women inmates proves that writers need look no further than the women around them for the role models of fictional heroines and anti – heroines. Collected by Sujinah, a former political prisoner, the stories in In a Jakarta prison not only chart the reasons for the imprisonment

Of women in Indonesia, they also illustrate the Multi – faceted role that women play in Indonesian society.

Demon Abduction

A Wayang Ritual Drama from West Java

Performed : Basari

Translator : Mattew Isaac Cohen

The World of Wayang – the shadow and rod puppet theaters of Java, Bali, Lombok, and other parts of Indonesia – is enticing and fascinating, however it has remained essentially inaccessible for those not initiated with the specific languages and traditions of the world. Demon Abduction : A wayang Ritual Drama from west java, the second volume in a series of translations of performances from the wayang theater, opens a window onto this vibrant and socially responsive world.

Wayang theater is an extraordinary weave of entertainment, esoteric teachings, ritual observances, social realities and earthy word – play. Throughout the performance, the performers and audience travel back and forth between myth and reality. Wayang performances are social events and the interaction between what is happening on the screen and off the screen, both during and before the performance is essential to understanding the phenomenon.

Once a year, in each of the five wards of the west Javanese town of Gegesik and in Surrounding villages, a wayang ritual drama entitled “Barikan” (Translated here as “Demon abduction”) is communally sponsored. Souls are rescued from the clutches of demon kings in the drama projected onto screen; boundaries between our dimension and the realm of malevolent spirits are regenerated on the ground. This book is a presentation, in English and Cirebon Javanese, of a 1994 performance by the shadow puppeteer Basari, complete with zany running commentary by the musicians, poetic lyrics sung by the songstress, and spirited audience interaction.

Beneath the Smoke of the Sugar – Mill
Javanese Coastal communities during the Twentieth Century

Editors : Hiroyoshi Kano, Frans Husken, Djoko Suryo

The present volume takes van Moll's survey as its point of departure. It presents the findings of a multidisciplinary team of historians, economists and anthropologists who restudied the Comal villages during the 1990s. The individual chapters analyse the historical setting and background of Comal, the socio-economic organization of village life during the late 20th century, and the socio-political transformation of the district amidst the turmoil of economic depression, war, revolution, and New-order development. Using a variety of research methodologies as the basis, the volume aims at reinterpreting the complex interaction between sugar cultivation and rural life in Java. In so doing, it provides a rich and multi-faceted view of the long-term process of socio-economic change.

Indonesian Women
The Journey Continues

Editors : Mayling Oey – Gardiner; Carla Bianpoen

The Journey Continues is a book about Indonesian women written (with one exception) by Indonesian women. Through a series of provocative and unflinching essays it provides a perspective on the concerns and aspirations of Indonesian women in a wide variety of social, cultural, religious, economic and organizational contexts. It carries their struggle through the repressive years of the Suharto regime and into the recent period of crisis and rapid political adjustment.

Above all, it is a book about continuity and change in the roles women play in society, and how women have and continue to fare in what remains essentially a man's world. It deals with both success and failure. While seeking to accurately reflect continuing issues and concerns through the voice of women, it also seeks to express their aspirations and hopes for the future. It is an Indonesian story, but it evokes themes of much more universal relevance and importance. It is for this reason that it is being brought out now, through this English translation, to a wider audience.
