For over a century, the Pabean Market has been the center of the spice trade in the agrarian Indonesian province of East Java. The sweet smell of spices filling the air; workers carrying baskets bursting with produce and seafood to the compact, cluttered shops lining the labyrinth of alleys the Pabean Market, is typical but in many ways unique for markets in Java. - Pabean Market in Surabaya is a testament to Indonesian tolerance and diversity. In the century-old structure, thousands of shopkeepers of diverse ancestries: Javanese, Madurese, Chinese, Arab, conduct business in harmony and mutual cooperation. Anton Gautama spent a year roaming the labyrinth of narrow alleyways, seeking the heart and soul of the place he first visited as a young boy. His photographs depict the wonderfully dynamic and complex life of this thriving market, the natural beauty of the architecture, and, above all, the faces and dress of shopkeepers expressing their pride in maintaining a rich cultural heritage.

Identity Crisis : Reflections on Public and Private Life in Contemporary Javanese Photography / Brian Arnold (Ed) Ellen Avril
Jakarta: Afterhours Books, 2017
134p.
9786026990150
$ 90.00 / PB
718gm.

This limited-edition, serial-numbered book is the result of a three-year study of contemporary photography by Brian Arnold made across the island of Java.

Working with a grant from the American Institute for Indonesian Studies, Brian traveled Java teaching and lecturing on photography at a variety of institutions and universities. In doing so, he engaged the developing ideas and patterns on photography emerging in the Javanese art schools and markets. The resulting book focuses on a group of artists and photographers addressing issues of personal or cultural identity, questioning or examining the forces that shape each of the individual photographers and the communities they represent, while also looking at the emergence and discourse of art photography in Java today.

Featuring work by a number of important photographers and artists working around the island – including Krisna Murti, Wimo Ambala Bayang, Jim Allen Abel, Angki Purbandono, Dito Yuwono, Deden Durahman, Henrycus Napit Sunargo, Arum Tresnaningtyas Dayuputri, Amran Malik Hakim, and Tino Djumini – as well as historical photographs from the collections at the National Gallery of Art in Australia, the New York Public Library for the Performing Arts, and Cornell University, the book offers a unique perspective on the emerging trends of fine art photography across Java. Brian's accompanying text offers historical and global contexts for understanding the uses of photography in Indonesia today, and includes some of his own pictures made while working in Java. An afterward by art historian and writer Aminudin TH Siregar provides further historical context for looking at photography in Indonesia.

Identity Crisis is being published in conjunction with an exhibition at the Herbert F. Johnson Museum of Art at Cornell University. This is the first exhibition devoted to work by Indonesian photographers in the United States.

Indonesian cuisine, just like the country itself, stands out with its diversity and exoticism. For the most part it is marked by intense vibrant flavors and typical ways of treating local ingredients, and includes the richness of spices and herbs. From the world favored spicy beef-stew, rendang from Sumatra, the popular fried rice, nasi goreng, the ubiquitous soup, soto, from the island of Java that varies from region to region, to satay, the typical local barbeque on bamboo skewer, and rice sets that can be found in up-class restaurants as well as in modest food stalls. Chili sauce popularly known as sambal is always featured in Indonesian meals. Dishes prepared at Indonesian homes that have now found their way to prominent hotels are also presented here including chicken, meat, vegetable and dessert menus, some come in banana leaf wrap. In this book, Sisca Soewitomo, a television personality known for her popular cooking shows, takes you on a trip around the archipelago and presents you with arrays of Indonesian dishes thickly colored by the indigenous tradition.

Krupuk is the collective term for deep fried crackers. It can be made using cassava flour or rice flour, from melinjo nuts or even from buffalo skin! The added flavours vary, from prawns or shrimps to fish, from garlic to deep fried shallots. A part of most meals in Indonesia, it provides added texture and crunch.

Petty Elliott draws inspiration from the many popular dishes served by vendors plying the streets and wet markets of Jakarta. From centuries past, migrants to the city have created a unique range of street foods in the capital, in varied combinations of ingredients, cooking styles and influences from Europe to Arabia, India, Malaya and China. Against the relentless onslaught of international fast foods, Petty has set out to preserve this tradition from being lost and added some of the best dishes from regions around Indonesia. The result is over 200 pages of recipes put together with easy, practical instructions suited for any modern kitchen with sensible alternatives when specific ingredients are not easily found. The author has been writing about Indonesian food for over 12 years, consulting to leading establishment, collaborating with Indonesian and international chefs and giving culinary demonstrations.

The book is about Dennis the Orang Utan. With a foreword of Dennis Weening, ambassador of the foundation Jaan, whom Dennis is named for. Dennis is a victim of the palm oil industry and rescued from the hands of an animal trader, along with a lot of other species. Dennis's mother was slain in a palm oil plantation so Dennis could be taken for trade in exotic pets. Meanwhile, the plantations take more and more rapidly in the original habitat of the animals. Dennis symbolizes all the victims of the palm oil industry and to call attention for the situation in Indonesia and the use of palm oil, the campaign Save Dennis started.

Ted Van Der Hulst is a specialized portrait photographer who captures character in his photographs. He followed the progress of Dennis the Orangutan, at the SOCP Rehabilitation Center in Sumatra. He captured the daily life of Dennis and his emotionally journey that he has to take without his mom. Dennis is a symbol of The main purpose is to raise awareness for the plight of the Orangutan and the Rainforests, through Dennis' Story.

Dennis the orangutan represents all the orangutans out there in the Indonesian forests, who all are seriously threatened to become extinct if we don't take action now.
