Ancient Indonesian Silver is the second publication of the Documentation Centre for Ancient Indonesian Art in Amsterdam.

It examines Indonesian silver, sculptures, objects and two pieces of jewellery, affording fresh insight into the history of silver made by Javanese silversmiths. While ancient Indonesian gold has received considerable attention from art historians, to date there have been no specialised publications on the subject of ancient Indonesian silver.

Most of the thirty selected items in this catalogue are published for the first time. They provide an introduction to the fascinating silversmith art of Central - and East Java from circa 750 to 1550. Some objects exhibit the foreign influences that helped shape Javanese art, as illustrated by early photographs. This begins with the impact of Hinduism from India and somewhat later that of Buddhism.

The illustrations in this publication include photographs of the works of art as well as old photographs and details of archaeological sites throughout Java. In this way, art lovers are able to better understand Indonesian culture as well as the virtuosity of Javanese silversmiths.

Yang Gaib dan Yang Kasatmata: The Seen and the Unseen / Dewi Anggraeni (Eds) Kartika Nurul Nugrahini & Trisnasari

Cerita pendek Dewi Anggraeni dalam kumpulan Yang Gaib dan Yang Kasat Mata ini menyedot pembaca masuk dalam ruang yang penuh misteri, ketegangan dan aroma mistik. Kecuali dua cerita yang diwarnai dengan kekerasan rumah tangga, semua cerpen berkisah tentang interaksi tokoh internasional dan lokal dengan kekuatan supernatural. Ada dukun susuk, mimpi yang mewujudkan, kampung hantu, sosok gaib yang terekam di kamera. Yang gaib di sini tidak ditampilkan sebagai eksotisme Timur, karena peristiwa dialami juga di Irlandia dan Australia. Di balik pesona horor cerpen-cerpen ini terselip tema kemanusiaan yang menggigit.

In this collection, Yang Gaib dan Yang Kasat Mata, Dewi Anggraeni's stories draw the readers into a world of mystery, suspense and mysticism. Except for two stories involving domestic violence, reading the rest we sense the underlying energy of supernatural power when local and international characters interact. There is dukun susuk, witchcraft where a talisman is inserted into a living human body, there are nightmares and premonitions which come true, a ghost village and a spirit not apparent to the naked eye. Yet the magical here is not part of the orientalist gaze into the exotic East, as we learn that similar phenomena also occur in Ireland and Australia. Behind the spellbinding horror in the stories, an undercurrent of human frailty is always present.

This book started with a zoom meeting by Rumah Produktif Indonesia and the National Library of Indonesia Press. The meeting resulted an agreement for creating a book publishing project related to the G20. The various articles in this book are ideas collected from the Indonesian people on topics ranging from global politics to education. With enthusiasm for contributing to the G20, they searched for data, compiled it, wrote it down, and sent it to the editor. As editors, we read and provide input for later revision. After being revised, the manuscript will be reviewed again to get the final version of the manuscript. The collaboration between the National Library of Indonesia and the Rumah Produktif Indonesia (RPI) has been carried out in several book publications and events. RPI's initiative to publish books at the National Library of Indonesia is a good and important initiative in our efforts to help the birth of new writers, as well as a synergy between writers and a contribution to produce reading material for our readers in Indonesia.
