Kedah was once known over much of the ancient world. The country played an important role in the development of international trade on account of its strategic position along the northwest coast of the Malay Peninsula, the nexus of the maritime routes between India and China.

Kedah: The Ancient Malay Kingdom explores the evolution of human society in the region, the foundation and development of one of the world's oldest kingdoms and the events that led to the suppression of its history.

Kompleks Arkeologi Sungai Batu (KASB) yang hanya seluas tiga kilometer persegi namun telah menemui 97 tapak purba dan tapak yang paling tua bertarikh tahun 788 SM iaitu tapak peleburan besi. Selain berperanan sebagai kawasan peleburan besi purba, KASB juga memaparkan tapak-tapak dermaga, pelabuhan, bangunan shahbandar, gudang dan tapak ritual. Justeru itu, puing-puing purba di KASB membayangkan kepesatan dan kemajuan yang pernah dikecapi oleh masyarakat Sungai Batu dalam ertikata ketamadunan yang tersendiri yang berpaksikan maritim dan industri.

Although Sungai Batu Archaeological Complex (SBAC) is located within a three kilometre square vicinity, however 97 sites has been found and the oldest site is dated 788 BC and it was an iron smelting area. SBAC too has uncovered several sites such as wharves, port, harbour master building, warehouses and ritual monument. Therefore, the ancient ruins at SBAC reflects the immense development and advancement that the Sungai Batu community had enjoyed the sense of a civilization that driven by maritime and iron industry.

The latest publication on Orientalist art is also the largest. Orientalist Paintings: Mirror or Mirage? is the most comprehensive survey of the subject that has been published. Exhaustive and enquiring, this book takes a new look at a field that was overwhelmingly popular in the 19th century before sinking into undeserved oblivion.

Now that worldwide interest has been revived, the Islamic Arts Museum Malaysia is doing justice to a genre that is more than just art by highly accomplished painters. It is also the most colourful source of information on the Islamic world at a time when it came fully into contact with the West. More than 300 paintings from the IAMM collection show how decisive this era was. Arranged in 13 different themes, it is both an introduction to the subject and a lively tour of the Middle East and North Africa as the old Ottoman Empire began to disintegrate. New collectors have emerged from that old world, eager for insights into their past that are stunningly depicted in these images of the 'Orient' as it was once known.

The Islamic Arts Museum Malaysia is proud to present this bilingual publication to honour the artworks of Japanese calligrapher Fuad Kouichi Honda. For years, the calligraphy of Mr Honda has been seen as unique, innovative and spiritual. As a consequence, the museum's management has decided to invest in nurturing this unique talent.

Years ago, the Islamic Arts Museum Malaysia recognised the beauty and uniqueness of Honda's calligraphy and their distinct expression of a philosophy. The museum then set forth to document, preserve and promote his artworks. Since then the IAMM has acquired over 65 large paintings, including Honda's Ijaza, which depicts the multiple variations of the Basmala. The collection records over 20 years of his professional career, tracing the flow of his ideas, influences, in-depth readings and interpretations of verses from the Qur'an. It has also established the IAMM as the custodian of the world's largest museum collection of Honda's works.

Islamic Arts Museum Malaysia is publishing a catalogue featuring one of the most celebrated object in the Malay World entitled Keris: Power and Identity. The catalogue will highlight almost 100 keris from the rich collection of His Royal Highness Sultan Sharafuddin Idris Shah Alhaj, the current Sultan of Selangor, and the Islamic Arts Museum Malaysia.

The fully descriptive and illustrative catalogue takes readers on a journey of the history of the keris to appreciate the finest craftsmanship on the keris with its elaborate decorations of gold, silver and gemstones as well as in the art of metallurgy and how it became a cultural symbol in the Malay World. The grandiosity of the exquisite keris will be seen through the distinctive shapes, styles and decorative elements of keris with its the regional variation as well its affiliation with the royals in this region.

The catalogue will be one of the rare publication on keris to illustrate the Islamic elements such as inscriptions, calligraphic motifs as well the adaptation of symbolism from the pre-Islamic era to the Islamic era found on the revered dagger.

《岁月吼声》记载了马来西亚 21 世纪初，大大小小的街头运动与示威集会。用了逾 20 年的时间来完成。它不只是我个人的回忆，同时也是一个大时代的历史，具阅读、鉴赏与收藏价值。

本书记录了约 56 场、百多张的影像，从国阵、民联、希盟、国盟，再到现在的团结政府，传递了我国街头运动以及大马第一次的改朝换代，留下了许多珍贵的照片，属于部分历史的见证，其珍贵不是金钱所能衡量的。而个人参与了在都门举行的大多数示威活动，并从年轻到步入中年。

摄影记者及本书作者陈弈龙一路走来，以相机为笔，记录着每一场街头示威，每一张照片都记录下日期、地点以及历史事件，看到照片如同回到当时的情景。这些年来拍摄了大量作品，然而随着年龄增长，记忆有些模糊，因此觉得是时候将这些历史轨迹、难忘的经历、多年的摄影心得与经验，结集成书，分享予更多人。陈弈龙希望这本书以及当中的照片，对他日有意研究国内示威集会的有心者，提供一些可参阅的“文献与图献”，只要能有一些贡献，心感欣慰。

This book entitled "The Roar of Time" chronicles the street movements and demonstrations in Malaysia at the beginning of the 21st century. It took the author, Tan Ee Long over 20 years to complete it. The book is worth reading, appreciating and collecting because it is not only my memory but also the history of an era.

It records about 56 rallies with more than 100 photographs featuring the street movements spanning the ruling of Barisan Nasional, Pakatan Rakyat, Pakatan Harapan, Perikatan Nasional government, and the current Kerajaan Perpaduan. It also captured the first regime change of the Federal Government in Malaysia, with many precious photos witnessing the nation's history. The value of these photos could not be measured with dollars and cents. He participated in most of the demonstrations in Kuala Lumpur personally. And he has aged into a middle-aged man from a youth during the process.

Tan Ee Long use his camera as his pen, and the photos are his diaries. It captured every street demonstration, and each image recorded the date, location, and historical events. Over the years, he has photographed a lot of works, but his memory is slowly fading as he grows older. He decided to compile these historical trajectories, unforgettable experiences, and years of insights and lessons into a book and share it with more people.

Tan Ee Long hopes this book and the photos will provide documentation for those interested in studying Malaysia's demonstrations and rallies in the future, and glad to have made a small contribution on this.

There are not many 20 years in a person's life. He hopes this photo book has a significant meaning to the history of Malaysia.

Mustapa Hj. Ibrahim is an important artis who was one of the main movers behind the founding of an avant-garde art group called Anak Alam during the 70's. He has made great contributions and sacrifices in leading this movement, while producing, either alone or collaboratively, a wide range of artworks. As a multi-talented artist working in a variety of fields, including as a painter, poet, illustrator, theatre prop designer, musician (playing gendang and bungkau), theatre actor and improvisational performer, stories and records regarding him and his artistic journey should be compiled and documented in a publication about our nation's visual art.

Sometimes known as "The Iron Lady" for her forthright manner and unflinching stances on matters related to her ministerial portfolio, among others, Tan Sri Rafidah Aziz has more than made her mark on domestic politics and the world stage as Malaysia's longest-serving woman Member of Parliament and longest-serving international trade and industry minister. Now, more than a decade after retiring, she has penned this memoir, in which she reflects on her formative years, her political career and the personalities she met during her years of service, and her life in retirement. Pulling no punches, she also shares her thoughts on politics, the nation, and what Malaysians need to do to move the country forward.

He was an Economics man, number one. Number two, I thought he was a very honest man. I think he has proved to be a very honest chap... even when I sometimes wanted something done, he refused," Tunku Abdul Rahman, Malaysia's first Prime Minister, in 1984.

"I've heard friends joking behind his back. They said even the ringgit is scared of him and that's why it never falls," Tun Hussein Onn, Malaysia's third Prime Minister, in 1980.

"If you want to find someone who presents an incorruptible image, he is the one to be cited. His integrity was unquestionable. I was struck by his knowledge, he is in complete control, he knows his subject very well," Tun Dr Mahathir Mohamad, Malaysia's fourth and seventh Prime Minister, in 2018.

"I personally pray the youth of Malaysia – Malay, Chinese and Indian – can take him to be a great role model on how to conduct himself or herself when he or she chooses to enter public service to serve the country and its people," Robert Kuok, business tycoon, in 2018.

"The story of a cancer specialist who played an instrumental role in the initial establishment of the UKM hospital and the IIUM Medical Faculty."

Born into a rural family, in the smallest state of Malaya, he changed his life and fortune through education. He had his secondary education in MCKK and then pursued the medical program in UM. Thereafter he joined the UKM academic staff training program to pursue internal medicine in Edinburgh before subspecialising in clinical oncology in Glasgow.

He played an instrumental role in the initial establishment of the UKM hospital. He was also the founding dean of the IIUM medical school and served the university till his retirement at 66 in 2015. This book covers the nostalgia of a kampung boy who travelled the world meeting people of different cultures and backgrounds, shaping, influencing and helping him to become a happy and successful man that he is. PRISON TO PALACE, PM FOR ALL, is the story of Anwar Ibrahim's turbulent, moving, bold and leadership voyage from a village boy to Prime Minister. The chapters weave through the intricacies of political challenges, repression and injustice, and trials and tribulations to achieve his childhood dream of being Malaysia's leader. It traces his fall and rises from the darkness of prison walls, ten years, and the inhumane treatment he experienced. He turned the adversity of sleeping on the cement into opportunity through brilliant, wiser, thoughtful, decisive, and more innovative thinking and reading in solitary confinement. Despite all the odds he faced in prison, he reflected positively upon life. Today, he has returned to reset Malaysia towards unity, peace and harmony. The book is timely in detailing Malaysia's changing political history. Anwar's struggle, journey and destiny are craftily narrated through anecdotal episodes.

The book comprises Malaysian narratives and articles that best describe Anwar through the inner stirrings of Malaysian writers and journalists. The book showcases penetrating insights into the events leading to the iconic moment of Anwar's crowning glory. It portrays stories of hurt and healing, abuse and forgiveness, gloom and glory, and tears and triumph. GE15, November 19, 2022, was a momentous day. It heralded a new economic, social and political landscape under Anwar's leadership. Anwar is firm in charting the future for Malaysians through his compromise, compassion, and moderation style to promote unity in diversity. Enjoy reading about the arduous yet successful journey of Anwar Ibrahim.

The true story of Asia's legendary 'Striptease Queen'.

"All her life Rose had battled poverty, prejudice, moral hypocrisy, racism, puritanism and gender discrimination – and often, but not always, emerged triumphant."

Sent by her impoverished parents from China to Singapore in 1931, six-year-old Rose Chan learned to survive on her wits and bravado. The Flower of Malaya transformed herself into the consummate show woman with her shocking dance moves and snake wrestling acts that took her and her troupe around Malaya and the world.

Behind the glamour, the five marriages, travel and adulation was a life of hardship, sorrow and suffering that threatened to break her but never left her bowed. In her 'retirement' years, Rose returned to the one place she felt happiest – Penang – where she ran her famous Sakura club until her untimely death in 1987.

Lawyer and poet Cecil Rajendra was introduced to Rose Chan in the 80s when she invited him to pen her memoirs. 'No Bed of Roses' charts the remarkable story of Asia's 'Striptease Queen' who was also known as the 'Charity Queen' in her later years.

This book is resulted from the development of Geological Rock Garden (GRG) in Universiti Teknologi PETRONAS (UTP). It is designed as part of immersive reality features to make the story comes alive. The book is illustrated in a comic version for children and adults' readings, which it is more fun and easier to read than regular books. This can be extremely appealing to those beginners who wants to explore on the story of earth and fossils.

This book is a combination of knowledge, talents and expertise from different level of staffs and students of UTP. It is proud to us that the book will be part of any individual learning process around the world.

Join Olumis and Osundu on an exciting journey into the fascinating world of biotechnology! In this fun and interactive children's book, young readers will learn all about the history and role of biotechnology and explore the amazing world of DNA. With a range of engaging exercises and activities, children will have a blast as they pair DNA bases, colour the DNA structures, and even learn how DNA plays a role in their family tree. And with the "Do-It-Yourself" section, kids can extract their very own DNA and marvel at the wonders of science right in their own homes! Packed with colourful illustrations and easy-to-follow instructions, this book is the perfect way to introduce young minds to the wonders of Biotechnology and DNA. So come along on this incredible journey with Olumis and Osundu and discover the amazing world of science in a whole new way!

They called him Botak Chin, and he was Malaysia's most notorious criminal in the 1970s.

There were many stories about him, and his life became the stuff of legend. Did his talisman from Thailand confer him supernatural powers? Could he paralyse policemen just by shaking their hands? Was he like a Robin Hood who stole from the rich to give to the poor?

Wanted: Botak Chin vividly illustrates episodes of Botak Chin's life, including accounts from the psychiatrist who interviewed him in Tanjung Rambutan. Although some elements will remain mysterious, his journey gives a snapshot of what Malaysia was like.

Wang Kelian – The Forgotten Valley (or Wang Kelian – Lembah Yang Kian Hilang) highlights the unique characteristics of the northernmost village in the northernmost state of Peninsular Malaysia - from the 370 million-year-old limestone Nakawan range to the Stone Age tools found on site as well as the amazing biodiversity that still exists - there is much that still remains undiscovered and undocumented in this part of the world. The book showcases one of the most unique terrains and forests in Semenanjung Malaysia where the Indochine and the Sundaland meet — over 200 species of birds and 40 species of mammals, 7 unique species of primates including the Stump-Tailed Macaque whose Malaysian population can only be found in this tiny 5000 ha area. Many species here are indeed endemic and not found anywhere else in the country. The author and photographer of the book, Peter Ong, spent two months in this northern corner to photograph and document the incredible biodiversity, terrain and cultural heritage of the Wang Kelian area. This documentation project by Roots and Shoots Malaysia and Perlis Nature and Wildlife with the support of Think City, The Habitat Foundation, and Jabatan Perhutanan Perlis resulted in a body of work which includes this 150-page full colour dual-language photo book (English and BM), a 30-minute documentary to be publicly broadcast later in the year, as well as an exhibition at Kuala Perlis and a two-month traveling exhibition around Perlis. The author and the supporting parties hope this book will be the beginning of a long-term collaboration with local partners and government agencies alike, no less because they're truly fallen in love with Perlis and its warm hearted people. They believe that by working hand-in-hand with various state holders and partners, future generations may continue to enjoy the clear blue skies, the lush greenery, and the clear crisp air of Perlis.

Stingless bees or locally known as Kelulut is a special of bees that already been part of people livelihood around the world since ancient time. Even though they are not as honey bees, their contribution as pollinators to thousands of plant species are not trivial. In comparison to other group of bees, stingless bees are more diverse and versatile. Stingless Bee Miracle Insect for Human Benefits present a comprehensive coverage on the impact of stingless bees in human lives. The book covers the diversity of stingless bee's species including Meliponuculture activities in increase the income of the people especially in rural area. The benefits of their products such as honey, bee bread and propolis are also been pondered. The technologies behind the stingless bee beekeeping and processing of stingless bee product are also been discussed. The objective of this book is to provide knowledge and information on the benefits of stingless bee to economy, health and environment. We believe that this book will enable the public and research community to understand the significant role of stingless bee in our lives. We hope that it will impart the excitement and awe associated with human knowledge about, and that use of these miracle insects from nature for human benefits.

Basically, this book describes about the types of herbs used in the preparation of herbal rice among the Siamese community of Kelantan. It also contains herbal names in three languages namely Siamese, Malay and English, in addition to scientific names. There are two components in its content, namely the picture component and the description component. The purpose of the pictures is to give a clearer picture to the readers regarding the shape and colour of the leaves and flowers and fruits of each type of herb used. Meanwhile, in the descriptive component, there are names and one scientific name as well as the brief morphological characteristics and traditional use of these herbs. It is hoped that by reading this book, readers can not only get to know the local herbs commonly used by the Kelantan Siamese community in the preparation of herbal rice but also get information related to other beneficial uses to cure diseases or maintain their health.

Buku ini merupakan hadiah istimewa dari Kumpulan Penyelidikan Belangkas UMT kepada semua pencinta belangkas di luar sana. Buku pengkulturan telur dan penjagaan juvenil ini dibuat khas sebagai usaha pemuliharaan belangkas pantai spesies, Tachypleus gigas yang semakin berkurang di Semenanjung Malaysia. Dengan adanya buku ini, semua lapisan masyarakat dapat berganding bahu membantu usaha pemuliharaan belangkas di kawasan masing-masing. Terdapat empat langkah mudah dalam proses pengkulturan telur dan penjagaan juvenil secara kurungan, yang diperincikan dengan bahasa yang mudah disertakan dengan bantuan gambar dan rajah agar mudah difahami dan diikuti. Buku ini juga menyediakan latar belakang dan maklumat mengenai belangkas seperti biologi, anatomi, dan kitar hidup belangkas yang disampaikan secara ringkas dan padat.

This book is a special gift from the Horseshoe Crab Research Group (HCRG), UMT to all horseshoe crab lovers out there. This egg culture and juvenile care book was specially published as a conservation effort for the decreasing coastal horseshoe crab species, Tachypleus gigas, in Peninsular Malaysia. With this book, all levels of society can work together to support the horseshoe crab conservation efforts in their respective areas. There are four simple steps in the process of egg culture and juvenile care in captivity as laid out in a simple language with illustration and images for easier understanding. This book also provides information about horseshoe crabs such as biology, anatomy, and the life cycle of horseshoe crabs, which is presented in a brief and concise manner.

This monograph details what is known about Timonius in Borneo, a group in the extremely hyper-diverse coffee family Rubiaceae, that no one has studied since some scattered initial documentation in the past few centuries. Now, all Bornean territories are much more explored, botanically collected from, and 'developed'. Still, very few studies have been made in Southeast Asia for complex and highly diverse plant groups which can illuminate our understanding of plant diversity and classification, and contribute to a more accurate assessment of plant lineage development and evolution. This is a first step, of many such first steps that will be needed, in addressing the incredible plant richness of the Malay Archipelago, a recognised region of spectacular biological richness.

This account documents 94 species of Timonius, a genus of mostly treelets to small trees still poorly understood throughout Southeast Asia, of which 68 species are newly recognised. Some 96% of the genus is endemic to Borneo, not known beyond this large, physiographically and geologically diverse tropical island, a centrepiece in the biogeography of a vast, biologically diverse region of our globe. The book includes discussions on the morphology, biology and reproductive ecology of Timonius and related plants, and is illustrated by 294 figures and 58 botanical line-drawings.

This account presents 62 vascular plant genera, comprising 162 species, currently known only from Borneo, with photographs and maps of their known and potential distributions. Borneo's exceptionally high plant diversity is threatened by rapid land-use change, hence, assessing threats to species uniquely found there, and identifying areas where a significant proportion are harboured, are urgent tasks. Centres of endemism especially found in northwest Borneo are considered against remaining forest cover and protected areas to highlight plant conservation exigencies. The book is updated from the author's research which was awarded the International Society for Plant Molecular Biology 2021–2022 Gold Medal for most outstanding doctoral thesis in plant science research at the National University of Singapore.

The edible wild fruits, nuts and seeds of Borneo that are found in the different forests from coastal seashores and islands, through the lowlands and hills, to the montane forests, and on different soils, are estimated to be in the region of 500 different species. These were consumed by the many groups of people inhabiting the island, over many decades. They were the ones who had initially discovered whether different fruits, nuts and seeds were edible, and that some otherwise toxic species become edible only after cooking or fermentation processes. Botanists and taxonomists have subsequently provided the scientific names for these plants and classified most of them into their respective families and genera. However, there are still new species being discovered in what are some of the most species-rich forests in the world, and for many genera, Borneo is their centre of diversity. Many species are rare and little known, and over 30% of plant species are endemic to Borneo.

The lowland forests are particularly rich, with most of the species being trees, but treelets, shrubs and herbs also have species with edible fruits. This guide mostly introduces the better-known species, but to showcase this diversity, some examples of rare or little-known species are also included, resulting in a total of 34 families, 55 genera, and 109 species being illustrated.

Many of the lowland forests have now been cleared for the development of agriculture, forest plantations, towns and roads, and the diversity of varieties of some species has become greatly reduced. Though some germplasm has been conserved in agricultural stations and research facilities, much more needs to be done so that those species with good commercial potential can be selected and bred as future crops for farmers. Some species have already been researched, and selected clones made available, but there are still many more with good horticultural potential.

This book is a collection of policy insights, articles and speeches by Tengku Zafrul Aziz, who was appointed as Malaysia's Minister of Finance on March 10, 2020, just as COVID-19 began to hit the nation. It provides a glimpse into the inner workings of the Ministry of Finance (MOF), particularly in meeting the nation's demanding fiscal needs, while also contributing to the difficult but ultimately successful fight against COVID-19 and managing the battered economy during the last two-and-a-half years.

Tengku Zafrul and his team faced multiple challenges in navigating the economy through stormy, uncharted waters while setting into motion several much-needed reforms to rebuild Malaysia's strength and resilience.

Throughout this unprecedented journey, he anchored his leadership of the MOF based on three key principles – to be RESPONSIVE, RESPONSIBLE and REFORMIST – with the goal of ensuring that the country emerges from the pandemic towards sustainable and inclusive growth.

Poignant, thought-provoking and insightful, Weathering the Economic Storm is a must-read for anyone seeking to understand how Malaysia overcame COVID-19 and how the future of its economy will be shaped from the perspective of one of the nation's rising leaders.

The history of pre-colonial, colonial and post-colonial Malaysia has witnessed the state's increasing involvement in economic affairs. Through the production and export of many sought-after commodities, mainly tin and rubber, Perak was increasingly incorporated into the world economy. The pre-capitalist system of production was slowly undermined and replaced by the capitalist system of production. Therefore, this book traces Perak's economic development path from the pre-colonial era through the colonial period till 2000. The changing mode of production, where capital accumulation increasingly took centre stage, also has other structural implications for society.

The world's creative industries are expanding rapidly more than ever before. The growth of the economy based on creative industry alone are rapid and expeditious. Creative industry in Malaysia on the other hand often refers to the film industry dominantly. This however is not entirely definite while other creative and arts field are also contributing to the industry. Field such as animation, music, performing arts, fine arts, crafting, and textiles have also played their role in coloring our nation socially and economically.

The government policy such as DIKN 2010, and the latest, DAKEN 2021 have been supporting the industry and hopefully to remain relevant. This is a community handbook, made by the community, for the community. The content of this book is far from complete, yet it would rather provide the basics and introduce us on what is creativity and culture in Malaysian, which in some way influenced the world we live today.

This book was written by the lecturers of the Faculty of Medicine and Health Sciences (FPSK), the Faculty of Law and Shariah (FSU), and the final-year medical students of the FPSK, USIM. The cases in this book were presented and discussed during the final year's Fiqh and Ethics placement. This book is inspired by and fulfils the university's vision to integrate information on aqli (i.e., medicine and law) with naqli sources derived from the Qur'an and hadith. The cases illustrate some of the most prevalent contemporary medical issues in the present day. The purpose of this book is to provide guidance and exposure to the medical and health professions regarding the medical management of specific issues. In addition, it offers valuable insight into the relevant law act and guidelines, as well as the Islamic values involved. We hope that this book will serve as a useful resource for students, academics, and anyone else interested in the comprehensive management of contemporary medical issues.

Persecuted in Thailand, a group of missionaries went on to establish Malaya's greatest contribution to Asia's networks of knowledge. A mining engineer desperately searched for gold in Sumatra, but instead found tin in Perak. A planter sailed inadvertently to a new land and won a Goncourt prize for his vivid descriptions of what he saw. An enterprising man pasted a rooster on a tin of sardines, creating what would become one of the most well-known food brands in Malaysia...

In editing and writing French Memories of Malaysia, the author Serge Jardin is surely the first to collect in one place nearly a hundred tales of French men and women who travelled to, explored, documented, fictionalized, and influenced each of the Malaysian states: the tales of priests, pilots, authors, architects, planters, philosophers, scientists, sailors, marauders, tricksters, and many more. Some names – the de La Salle brothers, Henri Fauconnier, Jean Cocteau, and Jacques Cousteau – may be familiar to history lovers, but others less so. These riveting characters left a mark on the country now called Malaysia, or, perhaps, it was Malaysia that left a mark on them.

In documenting these stories, French Memories adds wonderful texture to Malaysia's rich cultural history, making it a worthy read for anyone interested in discovering the world as it once was a frontier of excitement, waiting to be explored.

Malaysia was no different as this story of Malaysia's most important band singing in English demonstrates. To this day no other band has been signed by an international record label to sing English language songs. This book has been compiled to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the band's first hit, 'I Wanna Thank You.'

This catalogue was compiled mainly based on the notes attached on each manuscript by the previous collector. There is no fixed system of transliteration in Turkish, therefore it is not always strictly uniform. It is arranged alphabetically by titles. The running numbers on the left hand corner of each entry is also used as identification numbers of each manuscript and its location on the shelves. Titles marked with star (*) on its running numbers were formerly belonged to the Urdu Collection.

Social security is one of the essential human rights embodied in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights 1948. Employment injury is one of the nine principal branches under social security that is recognised in international human rights law and international labour standards. Firstly, the book attempts to cover previous study and existing gap in employment injury benefits at domestic and international level. Secondly, the book provides insights on the scope of equality and non-discrimination under the international human rights law and international labour law towards migrant workers. Thirdly, author discusses with an in-depth analysis on the standard of employment injury benefits under the international legal framework. Fourthly, this book analysed the recognition of employment injury protection for migrant workers to what extent they are being protected. Lastly, the discussion focuses on the sufficiency, adequacy, shortcomings of existing mechanisms followed by specific recommendations. Author adopts methodology comprised of doctrinal and socio-legal studies with critical analysis, interpretation, and application of related laws on employment injury protection for migrant workers were applied as legal techniques. Additionally, it helps law students, legal educators, legal practitioners, and policy makers as well in understanding the protection of migrant workers towards employment injury benefits under international law. Thus, this book has been structured with combination of chapters which was derived from part of Ph.D thesis.

$ 125.00 / HB

This book presents the liability of companies in a variety of scenarios. The corporate vehicle is used in diverse fields of business and the company, its directors and officers are potentially subject to liabilities for various infringements of the law.

Comprehensive in its coverage, this book provides much needed guidance on corporate liability after the implementation of section 17A of the Malaysian Anti-Corruption Commission Act in June 2020 and the liability of companies for the misuse of the corporate vehicle by its owners and officers. Tied to this is the key concern today on ascertaining beneficial ownership of companies, a matter which will be statutorily covered pursuant to upcoming amendments to the Companies Act 2016.

The book examines the concept of separate legal personality and the liability of companies in different areas, including contract, tort, criminal law, securities law, banking law, environmental law and occupational safety and health law. The rules of attribution in criminal cases to make corporations liable for the criminal wrongdoings of their directors, employees and agents are thoroughly surveyed.

$ 80.00 / PB

Property transactions attract various types of taxes, often involving complex questions. One main question is whether profits made in property transactions are taxable under the Income Tax Act 1967 or the Real Property Gains Tax Act 1976. How will the taxes be assessed when properties are transacted between different parties, or transferred within the taxpayer's same business? How will transactions involving shares in property companies be treated? How are property transactions by real property companies governed?

This concise yet comprehensive book answers these baffling questions and other issues in relation to tax reporting and assessments of property transactions. It provides a practical understanding not only of the law but also of computation methods involved in taxation associated with the disposal, transfer, and conversion of property.

The Employment (Amendment) Act 2022 comes into force on 1st January 2023. With effect from that date, the Minister of Human Resources amended the First Schedule and increased the scope of the Act from persons earning not more than RM 2,000 to all persons engaged under a contract of service. This was indeed a quantum leap benefiting all employees in the country. The interest of employers was safeguarded by limiting entitlement to payments for overtime work on rest days and public holidays and termination benefits to those earning up to RM 4,000. One of the greatest benefits that all employees irrespective of salary will enjoy is access to the Labour Court.

After the filing of an action in court, a series of procedures and applications can be tactically deployed by adept court lawyers to gain an advantage over opponents. These range from summary disposal to discovery of documents or even an application for security for costs to pressure an insufficiently resourced plaintiff. The proper mastery and deployment of the arsenal of preliminary applications will no doubt contribute to success in litigation.

Written by an experienced criminal law practitioner, this book contains a wealth of knowledge that sheds light on the technicalities of the criminal litigation process in Malaysia. The text is presented in a lucid and readable manner and contains significant recent court decisions and new legislative developments.

This edition updates important topics, including jurisdiction of criminal courts, persons who may arrest and rights of an arrested person, powers of the Public Prosecutor, transfer of cases, processes of bail, impeachment of the accused, trial procedures, mitigation, sentencing trend, stay of sentences, and the court's revisionary powers. The recent landmark apex judgment on defence of absolute privilege is explored, and a discussion on the presence of legal counsel during the recording of statements has been added. There are also updates to the topics of procedures for arrest and detention of children, powers and orders of the court for child offenders and procedure for children detained under the Security Offences (Special Measures) Act 2012 ("SOSMA").

Appendices containing important sample documents used in criminal litigation supplement the exhaustive text, while comprehensive charts which provide a useful overview of each topic are available for quick reference and guidance. This book is a necessary reference for the various parties involved in the administration of criminal justice as well as students studying the subject of criminal procedure.

30 years have passed since the fall of the Berlin Wall in 1989 ending the Cold War. Optimism about the future of a more open, borderless, interconnected world is being replaced by pessimism that sees the world coming closer to the ruin of the rivalry of super powers, the rise of populist leaders and the emergence of ultranationalism.

No matter how technologically advanced, or how civilized, civilization can be, international relations will not escape the following laws:

“Enemies of the enemy are friends”

“No enemies or friends remain”

“Geography is destiny”

Guided by three key geopolitical sciences—POWER, GEOGRAPHY and IDENTITY—this book will guide readers in understanding the causes behind conflict and cooperation between nations.

Malaysia desperately needs a new perspective and a new narrative to rid itself of the 60-year yoke of regressive policies and politicking that has stifled its advancement. Race, religion and identity politics still dominate the national narrative. The solution to these destructive politics will not come from the peninsula. It is Sabah and Sarawak, with its history of racial harmony and religious tolerance that we must look to for that new perspectives, direction, and leadership. Talk of ketuanan Melayu and the supremacy of one race or religion is anathema to the people of Borneo states. These West Malaysian narratives have presented a real threat to the racial and religious harmony we have enjoyed in East Malaysia. In Sabah and Sarawak, there is no concept of a single dominant race, as we are all citizens of the nation called Malaysia with equal rights. Sabah and Sarawak did not join Malaysia, the two states were equal partners in its formation. Malaya, Sabah and Sarawak gave birth to this nation together; without Sabah and Sarawak, there is no Malaysia. It is time the federal government acknowledges the massive contribution of Sabah and Sarawak, especially its oil resources, to the wealth of the nation.

This book looks at al-Attas' contribution to the reformulation of the concept of the human soul, the intellect, the heart as an organ of spiritual cognition, prophecy, and happiness. Ibn Sina's ability to formulate arguments, develop ideas and weave differing opinions into a fabric of new ideas that presents a new outlook strikes a remarkable resemblance to al-Attas as can be gleaned from his works. As early as his Some Aspects of Sufism as Understood and Practised Among the Malays, followed by his Mysticism of Ḥamzah Fansuri, and later his Commentary on the Ḥujjat al-Ṣiddīq, to cite a few, al-Attas has been consistent in the triangulation of ideas from the faylasūf, the mutakallimūn and the Sufis on key ideas of philosophy, theology, and metaphysics in Islam; a counter-thesis to the image which more often than not portrayed the three groups of thinkers as mutual adversaries. He has done so not to establish an artificial coherence amongst them and their ideas, but more importantly — and indeed this is quintessentially his — to put major ideas in their proper places, based on hierarchy and benefits to man, to commensurate the ranks and degrees of authorities in knowledge of reality and truth: that is adab towards knowledge.

This book is a rational-logical rebuttal of atheism and discusses multiple aspects like the Theory of Evolution, Natural Selection, etc. It reveals how Evolution was known to Muslim scholars, centuries before Darwin. The book also discusses the Big Bang theory and its implications. It rationally negates the charges that atheism has levelled against religion and God. It finally rectifies and clarifies the idiosyncrasies atheism alludes to by discussing historical, socio-political and theological aspects. Why has atheism suddenly grown significant in recent times after thousands of years of insignificance or non-descript existence? This book succinctly establishes what the real reasons are. It clarifies universal existence and also the different stages of human existence.

Carbonate pore systems are fascinating for petrographers to look at and a challenge for engineers to deal with. Carbonate pores are born in the sea, and constructed by calcifying organisms, as beautifully illustrated in this petrographic atlas. Many marine organisms, such as corals use carbonate to form their exoskeletons, shells or other structures out of ubiquitously available dissolved inorganic carbon in sea water. Pores form within shells, in between shell fragments and when carbonate shells dissolve. Pores in carbonate reflect the depositional environment and the stratigraphic evolution of fossils as part of the carbonate rock record. Its dimensions vary from nanometers to kilometres. Heterogeneous, multi-scale carbonate pore systems are volumetrically significant within Miocene reservoirs in SE Asia.

Japan has been searching for an effective way to reduce gender inequality in the country. Many Initiatives have been undertaken by the Japanese government, however the effectiveness of those efforts to bridge the gender gap between working fathers and working mothers remain question. To come to grips with this issue and ensure the findings of previous investigations on the subject are accurate and up to date, this book discusses the insights given by working fathers in relation to gender equality. The focus of investigation is on the challenges of working fathers in performing their work and non-work roles. Having to compare the perspectives on both sides, working mothers and working fathers may help with the development of comprehensive policy solutions to the issues faced by the 'Fathering Japan' initiative and the contextual elements in the country. Navigating a new norm requires more than the concept and idea, but the acceptance of Japanese society to change the traditional gender roles with more modern family roles and values.

This book intends to reset and make Malaysia into a nation for the rakyat, not just for a select few. Resetting Malaysia compiles articles that put forth ideas on how every Malaysian can make changes that will eventually bind us into a single nation that respects the faiths, cultures and lifestyles of all—by challenging inherited perspectives, narratives and perceptions. Mohd Tajuddin Mohd Rasdi explores how educational institutions impart imitative and uncritical practices, how spirituality can inspire personal and political change, and how our fractured past can be critically understood, to underline that the rakyat are the true owners of the country.
