Pinoy Television: The Medium of our Lives, The Story of ABS-CBN / Thelma Sioson-San Juan
Pasig City : Benpres Publishing Inc., c1999
207 p.; ill.; 33cm
971-92106-05
$ 100.00

[Pinoy Television: The Story of ABS-CBN tells of the Parallel growth of the medium and the network that virtually created it. It is the story of an innovation that came to these shores from the west and was quickly embraced as an industry, a creative endeavor, and an experience. And it is the story of pioneering men and women, industry leaders and talented artists led by Eugenio Lopez, Jr., who were there as TV grew from novelty and passing fancy to lifestyle guardian and chronicler of the times. The book combines formidable factual and visual research and hours of conversations with the industry's dominant past and present personalities to deliver an extensive, riveting narrative of the history of pinoy television, from the first tentative tower built by American engineer James Lindenberg and taken over by Judge Antonio Quirino, to a booming enterprise acquired by the Lopez family on a legendary contact signed on a napkin, only to be nipped at its peak by martial law; from brave efforts under government control to the euphoria of renewed freedom of expression and the promise of aggressive enterprise into the streamlined, borderless technology of ABS-CBN's tomorrow.]

[From the days when they were outcasts working as menial laborers, to the present when some of them have become the most powerful individuals in Philippine society, the Chinese immigrants have been a source of fear and distrust, as well as mystery and fascination, their role in the history of the Philippine nation shrouded in myths and fascination, truths. Increasingly, however, the Chinese Filipinos, the descendants of these immigrants, have assumed various roles as they integrate into and intervene positively in the mainstream of Philippine Society. Chinese Filipino tells the story of the Chinese who came and made the Philippines their home, but it is far more than an ordinary history book. The result is a book that reveals starting truths and shatters many previous misconceptions. Designed by Felix Mago Miguel, lavishly illustrated with specially –commissioned photographs by Sonny Yabao. It is an invaluable resource for both the Filipinos who wish to understand the history and Struggle of this Community, as well as for the descendants of the Chinese immigrants today who are in danger of forgetting their past and are often still seeking to forge an identity.]

Despite the increasing popularity of the rondalla and the bulk and variety of its repertoire, it is peculiar that rondalla musical scores are rarely available. Most lay musicians learn tunes and do improvisations by rote and imitation, or by listening to taped or live performances. This poses difficulties for students and performers.

In this landmark collection, Culig Provides rondalla scores for twelve Philippine folk dances with most of the pieces arranged in six parts – bandurria 1, bandurria 2, laud, octavina, guitar, and bass. Estudienting arrangements are done for the rest of the pieces for richer timbre and texture. There are also suggested levels of difficulty assigned to each piece.

Culig's Rondalla Arrangements of Filipino Folk Dances is an important, definitive collection that promotes and enhances rondalla music and enriches rondalla literature.]

[This Book was Written Partly in response to "Popular demand". The authors were encouraged by enthusiastic readers of their first Volume, Self Portraits. Twelve Filipino Artists Speak, and by the Suggestion of the Ateneo da Manila University Press that they follow up with a Second book. This Work Therefore Continues the first volume by looking deeply into the interaction between the lives and the works of another group of Filipino artists, ranging from the established to the not so well established, from the formaliy trained to the self –taught. Without exception, all of these artists have integrated their life concerns and experience into their works interesting and creative ways. The Life story is a new, emergent methodology in the humanities that has much used in qualitative research, particularly in studying the marginalized. The life story gives them a voice and enables them to break their silence. The authors of this book believe that women artists, despite the great strides they have made in their profession, still belong to the marginalized. From another perspective then, this collection of life stories is a book on women's studies, with a focus on women artists, and is very much a part of the Ateneo University Press series, women on Women.]
