MM-ID- 60539

[Based on three decades of anthropological field research, CHINESE TRADERS in a PHILIPPINE TOWN addresses two aspects of a provincial town in the Philippines. First, it examines the town's Chinese trade community as composed of individuals and families who follow commercial ends with varying degrees of success by means of a wide range of competitive tactics. Second, it describes changes the town has experienced during recent decades and how these have been to a large degree the result of long-term, commercial strategies followed by substantial Chinese entrepreneurs.]

[The book delves into the important role played by development anthropology in the Overseas Development Assistance (ODA) programs of nations. Without an adequate understanding of the dynamics governing relationships of donor and recipient countries, especially with regards to culture and national identity, ODAs have little chance to succeed in the long-term. This is where the practice of development anthropology makes its distinct contribution in the sensitivity to the nuances that must be factored into the design and implementation of ODA programs. Assistance, to be most useful, must go beyond mere economics, and consider the dignity, rights, aspirations, and cultural character of peoples who, in being helped, are allowed to remain who they essentially are.]

[Gathered in this volume are original works and researches written on Southeast Asian archaeology to honor Wilhelm G.Solheim II. The impressive number of scholars representing almost all the Southeast Asian countries and institutions in North America, Australia, and Europe, as well as the wide coverage in subject matter, is testimony to the pivotal role solheim played in the advancement of archaeology in the region. This book is a valuable reference for archaeologists working in Asia, and for those interested in the history and development of Southeast Asian archaeology.]

Good Character and Bad Character : The Manobo Storytelling Audience As Society’s Jurors / Hazel J.Wrigglesworth

[In this study Dr. Wrigglesworth presents a selection of narratives connected with the settling of Ilianen Manobo custom-law cases. The narratives are presented in diglot form with English translations done directly from performances by the Manobo traditional storyteller in her own language. Comparative notes are provided, illuminating the tale-types [according to Aarne & Thompson classification of world oral literature) and the diaspora of the narratives.

An introduction deals with Mrs. Mengsenggilid's acquisitions of her extensive narrative repertorie, the shaping of her narratives as a result of her involvement with the custom-law case process, and her style which reveals a control of rhetorical devices that prove her to be a master in the art of maintaining the emotional involvement of her audience throughout an entire nighttime.]

[Communication Research has benefited from the theoretical and methodological traditions of the arts and humanities as well as the social sciences. Over the years, theoretical perspectives and methods have become more progressive and sophisticated. This book serves as a guide to specific communication research methods, like content and reception analyses, field research, organizational culture and climate, and web page analyses. Thus it is a useful and practical resource on research methods for both Filipino and Asian students of communication.

The book concludes with a research agenda which aims to probe deeper into the interaction between the medium, audience, and user. This reflects developments in communications technologies and how these have resulted in changes in the workplace as well as in lifestyles.]

[The succeeding sections will trace the history of Philippine television: from the early beginnings in the fifties, to the tri-media companies of the sixties, to the controlled environment of the seventies under a Martial Law regime, to the freedom regained of the post-Martial Law eighties, to the big conglomerates of the nineties, and advent of what I would call moro-moro television in 2000 and beyond.]

Radyo : An Essay on Phillipine Radio / Elizabeth L. Enriquez
Philippines : National Commission for Culture and the Arts, c2003
48 p.; 22cm.
$25.00
MM-Id- 62632

[Of all the media of mass communication in the Philippines today, radio commands the widest subscription. As in the rest of the developing world, the affordability of radio sets and the ability of radio technology to reach people in remote areas that do not enjoy the amenities of electricity make it the most accessible of all media. At the end of the 20th century, only 71 percent of the 75 million Filipinos had access to television and only 48 percent read newspapers, while 85 percent enjoyed radio's daily menu of music, talk, and drama.

The vigor of the radio industry is perhaps most evident in the number of radio stations operating in the Philippines today, which is 580 as of last count. The round-the-clock radio signals permeate the home and the workplace, the school and the mall, and even the outdoors. Radio's ubiquity and energy today are a symptom of its strong connection not only with the nation's political, economic and cultural life, but also with the daily lives of most Filipinos.]

[Land is life. Land is our physical life—food and substance. Land is our social life, it is marriage, it is status, it is security, it is politics. In fact, it is our only life. Tribesmen would rather die to protect their traditional land... When you take away our land you cut away the heart of our existence... Big foreign companies being from an alien culture would neither understand nor grasp the significance of this. For them land is a commodity to be bought or sold. They just treat this as an exploitable resource... Why would a genuine funding organisation like the World Bank Group fund culprit industries and their government cronies to violate lesser indigenous communities' right to exist?]

[Between Japan and Southeast Asia there exists an agreeable coexistence and codependency, a kind of new transglobalization, an in-mixing of global economies and cultures, often articulated in cultural tensions and clashes, leading sometimes to wars and new regional formations and alliances. This book examines areas of dialogue and critique, intersections and disjunctures, including cultural boundary crossings, such as aikido in Singapore, Japanese female students in Australia, postwar films in the Philippines, and the rock subculture in the global era.]

[The longest free-flowing river in Southeast Asia is under threat. Originating high in the Tibetan Plateau and emptying into the Andaman Sea off the coast of Burma, the mighty Salween River sustains some of the world's most fertile teak forests as well as the livelihoods of numerous ethnic peoples. But powerful interests are at work to build huge dams that would block the flow of the Salween forever.]

[The world of mangroves is complex and offers many challenges for the casual visitor. An understanding of the nature of its parts is essential before a clear idea of its essence can emerge. Mangroves have acquired a mystical, somewhat eerie reputation because of their unusual habitat between the land and the sea, the outlandish forms that they adopt and their unapproachable terrain. As one becomes familiar with various forest type and their animal inhabitants, a deep sense of their beauty will develop. It is easy to be romantic about these strange ecosystems but... it is necessary to be better informed.]

[Fishes of the Philippines : A Guide to identification of families is an easy to use book on how to identify families and species of Philippine fishes. This book not only contains numerous black and white line drawings showing family characteristics, but also more than 450 full color illustrations of fish species. A new and simple method for identifying fish to family level uses easily observable external features such as body shape, size, and positions of fins. Comprehensive information detailing physical appearance, habitat, ecology, and local names is provided for more than 90 fish families while the use of cartoons helps to make learning easy and fun. Written in clear English, this book is a valuable resource for members of local communities monitoring fisheries, teachers, students, and laypersons.]

[On 28 September 1901, the Balangiga Massacre became the 9/11 of its day. It shocked America to the core and exposed the notorious Samar Campaign. Yet even decades later an investigator predicted "the true history of this event can never be written." Now, a ten-year research project uncovers the hidden background to the Balangiga incident, Its relevance to today's conflicts, and the hope for reconciliation.

Bob Couttie's investigation provides new and important insights into the hidden side of a forgotten war.

[The Untold People's History : Samar Philippines explores the deepest, core historical roots of the impoverishment, subjugation, and miseducation of third world peoples such as the Samarnons and the rest of the Filipinos. Training a critical eye at these societies' precolonial and colonial past to the present, it delves into the facts and figures of class divisions, exploitation, and unfair trade that has underdeveloped and plundered these economies. Furthermore, it traces the persistent path of rebellion in the island from Hispanic to contemporary times.

The book's special focus on Samar allows it to tackle the subject in rich detail and depth. Beyond this, it offers the insight that what has turned and kept Samar and the rest of the Philippines poor and weak in fundamentally what continues to devastate, too, the rest of the third world today.]

[Looking at historiography as a journey of understanding, the author has outlined a thousand-year stretch for Butuan's Past. The Book's title expresses a facet of the place's rich history when the toponym Butuan was first recorded in the Sung Annals.

This ancient harbour, situated on a broad delta, played host to a vigorous exchange of native exports of gold, beeswax, and civet, for ceramics, iron and copper items, and fabrics. At its peak, it sent five tribute missions to the Chinese Empire to request for a direct trading status. But cultural exchanges also left its mark on the people's psyche; for instance, Indian spiritual concepts became embedded in the people's language and world-view. The book also essays its decline and the subsequent rise of other trading polities in the archipelago.]

[This nonfictional narrative is the story of three brothers-Carlos, Jorge and Jose Sievert y Barriere, who in the late nineteenth century made the courageous decision to leave their home in Cadiz, Spain. for the Philippine Islands, the last of Spain's Colonial possessions, in search of a more rewarding life. The new immigrants learned about their adopted country's turbulent past, affecting both Christian and Muslim natives, and its cultural and economic transformation from Andres Reyes, a successful abaca trader, born and raised on the Visayan island of Samar.]

[Ginto: History Wrought in Gold this time focuses solely on the Gold collection of the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas, cataloguing its holdings exhaustively. More significantly, it is a reading, as historical text, of pre-hispanic artifacts in the precious metal, in the light of the most recent data and the latest theories. Ginto is an attempt at a historical narrative about the Philippines before 1500, drawn from the in-depth study of techniques and designs in Philippine gold artifacts, the few extant primary sources, scattered archaeological data, and wide-ranging cultural studies. The Bangko Sentral Gold Collection is part of the national heritage not only because of its material value, but more importantly because it is a legacy from a golden age.]

[Album : Islas Filipinas, 1663-1888 compiles some of the numerous albums produced during that period and weaves for its reader a compelling pictorial story of the Philippines when it was under the Spanish Colonial Government.

It covers wide range of artworks—from calligraphy to cartography, from military uniforms to Manila costumes, from playing cards to building plans, all of which attest to the skill and discipline of 17th to 19th century artists—from the more well-known artists like Jose Honorato Lozano, Damiano Domingo, Justiniano Asuncion to the recently discovered ones like Esperidion de la Rosa and Felix Martinez. The book reveals artworks never before seen in the Philippines and traces the development of tipos Filipinos—from the earliest ones in the Spanish Archives when Philippine painting started to become secular, to the more polished works of Domingo and Asuncion and the more spontaneous and lifelike works by Felix Martinez.

Short articles on how to establish authenticity in artworks will also help illuminate on this painstaking but necessary task.

Album: Islas Filipinas 1663-1888 is a new way of looking at and seeing the Philippines—from the visionaries of that period.]

A woman of a certain age entertains impure thoughts about a teenager. A young man in a ménage a trios simmers his loneliness to break through the codes of secrecy that bind men. A genteel Society boy confronts envy, lust, and malice, and finds them emanating from himself. Written between 1989 and 2004, these stories trace the boundaries between grace and sin, baring our human capacity for both.]

Directing for Theater : A Personal Approach / Edgardo Bengson de la cruz

$ 10.00
MM-Id- 62803

[This book is as close as one gets to an attempt to define that elusive gift and talent for directing theater. DIRECTING FOR THEATER is a record of one director's personal odyssey into the rarely charted waters of the directing art. As stated in the foreword, it is "a reflection of the wisdom that Edgardo Bengson de la Cruz has developed over many decades as a teacher of voice, movement, acting, and directing" (Allan Smith, Dean Emeritus, California State University, Hayward).

In his lyrical prose, the author's passion for his art resounds throughout the work as he provides both general exhortations and specific tips regarding the craft of directing.]

[Bayanihan, the National Folk Dance company of the Philippines, is about preserving our folk dance heritage and transforming this into theater art.

The idea of this book started to take shape five years ago. There was so much more to be said about Bayanihan that what its first book, published in 1987, could possibly cover. So much had happened since that publication. Bayanihan founder and chairman emeritus Helena Z Benitez felt that the Bayanihan memory had to be recorded and relived.

The Bayanihan memory traverses six continents over a span of forty – seven years – a feat that by itself bears retelling. Much of the recollections in this book were drawn from the collective memory of the founder and the pioneer directors ; Leticia P.de Guzman, Lucrecia R.Kasilag, Lucrecia R.Urtula, Jose Lardizabal, Rodrigo Perez III, Lourdes E.Guillermo, Teodoro Hilado, the alumni, and Isabel A. Santos who was tasked to write the book.]

[The product of the multi-year Culture and Governance Network (CGAN) Project and the collaboration of the Development Academy of the Philippines with the National Commission for Culture and the Arts and Sambayanan 2000 Festival, this volume is the first major effort to explore the importance of culture to questions of governance and the possibility of models in governance in culture and the arts. It features case studies by Roland Tolentino (National Capital Region), Dante Dalabajan (Palawan), Melvin Lamanilao and Nestor Horfilla (Mindanao), Pamela Gallares-Oppus (Bohol), and Norma Respicio (Vigan, Northern Luzon); crossnational comparisons of culture and governance models in Asian countries by Karina Bolasco (Philippines), I. Iketut Sukardika (Indonesia), and Makoto Ito (Japan) and the workshop discussions of the Tagaytay international conference staged by the DAP in 2001 as the culminating activity of the entire CGAN Project; and the results of the national survey of culture and governance projects in local government units, Overview essays by DAP President Eduardo T. Gonzalez, and co-editors Ma. Antoinette G. Virtucio, and Oscar V. Campomanes set these essays and project discussions/results in the broader contexts of globalization, nationalism and localism, and academic cultural studies.]

[Hong Kong has not been spared from the region's financial and economic debacle.
Its gross domestic product (GDP) has declined. Unemployment and underemployment have reached record highs, and the property market has virtually collapsed. Its once vigorous stock market has turned bearish; credit is hard to come by; and trade figures have been discouraging. In addition, investments have slowed down. Companies, regardless of size, are going under and laying off thousands of workers. Tourist arrivals are dwindling.

Political uncertainty also reigns as calls for greater democracy swamp the one-year-old Beijing-installed Special Administration Region (SAR) government of Tung Chee-wah. This followed the May 1998 legislative elections where opposition parties received an over-whelming mandate. On top of that, Tung's response to the economic crisis has been dismissed as inadequate and headed in the wrong direction by many analysts and a coalition of political parties in the legislature.]

[This paper examines the problems and prospects for peace and stability in Cambodia, following the elections held in July 1998. It also looks at the socioeconomic issues confronting the fragmented Cambodian nation-state, and examines its external relations.

The main argument of this paper is that long-term peace and stability in the country cannot be ensured unless the main protagonists learn to transform their struggle for power from "jungle war" politics to the politics of accommodation.]

[‘Kuyaw! Street Adolescents in Street Gangs in Davao City’ shares the results of a Participatory Action Research conducted by Tambayan Center with the street adolescents themselves exploring and understanding their situations and life issues.

‘Kuyaw!’ describes the plight of children and young people on the streets and their remarkable feat of survival despite the daily perils they face. It looks into the reasons why they end up on the streets, as well as share stories of abuse they end up on the streets, as well as share stories of abuse they have experienced both within their homes and on the streets. It demonstrates their resiliency and inherent capacities to move on despite the odds.

‘Kuyaw!’ confronts the stigma and discrimination hurled against children and young people on the streets. It narrates their stories, thoughts. opinions, pains, and hopes – in their own voices, from their own points of view.]
