[Philippine Heritage Architecture before 1521 to the 1970s is a survey that seeks to provide students, built-environment professionals and aficionados of both art history and architecture with the breadth and scope of distinctly Philippine architecture from various periods covering more than 500 years. Authored by Maria Cristina Valera-Turalba, with an insightful introduction by Jaime C. Laya, Ph.D. and incisive essays by Maria Joycelyn B. Mannaghaya and Geronimo V. Manahan, Ph.D. and over 600 color and archival photographs accompanied by concise descriptions, the book is a groundbreaking document on the structures that have shaped the way Filipinos live, pray, work and play, providing an accessible reference for an appreciation of the broad range of Philippine architecture. In July 2005, the book had a worldwide introduction through the 22nd Union internationale des architectes world congress 2005 in Istanbul.]

$ 45.00

[The Philippines has long been known for its creative designs in furniture and for the skill of its artisans in crafting modern products from traditional materials. This book takes a giant step forward – into the realm of modern architecture. Twenty-five stunning homes showcase the best of residential design by a number of outstanding Filipino architects and designers. Blending the graceful proportions of Oriental forms with the rigorous discipline and modernism of Western architecture, the houses retain an affinity with natural materials – warm hardwoods, rustic stone and slate, earthy clay and tile – at the same time introducing innovative use of glass, concrete, steel, and aluminum. Water elements and lush tropical gardens complete the transition from traditional conventions to Asian fusion and international modernist trends. From expansive courtyard homes and gracious pavilion residences in elite sub-divisions of Manila to elegant vacation homes in Batangas, the architectural landscape presented in this book is a refreshing and inspiring response to modern living in the Philippines.]

[Living Landscapes and cultural landmarks takes the reader to eight outstanding places in the Philippine Archipelago designated by UNESCO as World Heritage Sites.

These places in the Philippines rank among other UNESCO World Heritage Sites such as Angkor Wat in Cambodia, Borobudur in Indonesia, and the Taj Mahal in India. The World Heritage Sites in the Philippines are the Tubbataha Reef National Marine Park and the Puerto Princesa Subterranean River National Park in Palawan, two of the richest eco-regions in the country teeming with diverse indigenous plant and animal life; the Rice Terraces in the Philippine Cordilleras; the Historic Town of Vigan in Ilocos Sur; and Baroque churches of the Philippines – Santo Tomas de Villanueva in Miag-ao, Iloilo; San Augustin in Paoay, Ilocos Norte; Nuestra Senora de la Asuncion in Santa Maria, Ilocos Sur; and San Agustin in Intramuros, Manila. Each of these sites represent the Philippines, its land, its people, its faith, its culture, its heritage and his history. The well-researched text and the rich imagery of the Photographs and illustrations in this book provide a unique understanding and clear synthesis of the significance of the World Heritage Sites in the Philippines.]

[San Agustin, the oldest stone church in the Philippines, was built in 1587-1604. The buildings, an architectural wonder, have survived earthquakes, typhoons and wars, to everyone's great delight. The museum was first conceived in 1965, when photographs of about one hundred Augustinian Churches in the Philippines were exhibited in one of the halls. Plans for a permanent museum were drawn up in 1968-1969, and in the 1970's through the 1990's all the rooms of the rooms of the Monastery were refitted as museum halls. The centuries-old collection of religious are of San Agustin Church has been preserved miraculously and is now displayed in the museum, to improve our lives and to lead us toward a better appreciation of those who have lives before us. We are proud to present this collection as very valuable proof on the rich cultural and religious heritage of the Filipinos.]

Space and Identity : Expressions in the Culture, Arts and Society of the Muslims in the Philippines / Abraham P. Sakili

[This book is a cultural study of space—a study of arts in Muslim space and a study of space in the culture, arts and society of the Philippine Muslims. Space, in unity with time, is a fundamental and dynamic framework for ordering human thought and action. In Muslim art and culture, the Islamic notion of space and time is tied up with Tawhid or the Unity of the Divine Principle which underlines the Muslims' basic assumptions of the universe, defines their relations with nature and guides them to understand how elements are interrelated in different art forms, as well as in diverse cultural settings. For a Muslim, as Khalifah or Divine's trustee, mitigating this global spatial problem has become his utmost concern.]

Water Privatization : Corporate Control Versus People's Control
Manila : IBON Books, c2005
xii, 238 p. : ill. ; 22 cm.
971-0325-54-X
IBON Issue Primer Series
$ 10.00

[As a focus issue facing the Philippines and the world today, the issue of water needs to be understood no longer simply as a consumer issue, but more comprehensively as a key resource that is being targeted by corporate globalization. It is both an environmental and social issues, both a problem due to maldevelopment and inequity in Philippine society and in the world and a problem of TNC control and exploitation intensified by neoliberal policies of privatization, deregulation and liberalization. It can no longer be comprehended in parts, but as an interconnected system of water resource development and management, infrastructure, and service utilities. This primer seeks to analyze the underlying issues on control over water services and resources (who controls out water and the extent of such control) in order to understand the context of today's water scarcity and inequity in access, and the imminent water crisis. An understanding of this context, in turn, allows us to critically view water privatization and other corporate-led measures to avert the water crisis and look for viable alternative framework and policies to promote equitable access to water.]

The Farmer's Way of Life / Jan Hoekstra
Quezon City : Claretian Publications, c2004
xv, 215p. : ill. ; 22 cm.
971-501-989-7
$ 10.00

[Farmers have a story to tell. And I have made an attempt to put that story into print. This book expresses thoughts which are in the minds of many farmers. The statements are short and as any farmer does, down to earth. The book does not lack vision and ideas. It may seem that it suggests simple solutions to often complicated situations. This is not because I underestimate the farmer's problems. But because I approach the situation not as an experienced writer, but as a farmer who calls a spade a spade, and who likes to take out the weeds growing between the crops. At the same time it gives some useful information to farmers and others who are interested in growing crops and in agricultural development. Most of all, this book would like to encourage and be of help in bringing about an urgent link and growing understanding between the farmer's community and others. Some of the chapters in this book do not seem to have any connection with agriculture or the farmer's way of life. But they are included, because whatever happens on our planer or in the country also affects the farmers' community, agriculture and food security. Farmers are not, or should not be a separate community but are a part of the community with the same duties, responsibilities and rights as any other occupation.]

Sustainable Tourism : Challenges for the Philippines / Edited by Ramon Benedicto A. Alampay
Makati City : Philippine APEC Study Center Network Secretariat, c2005
xi, 304 p. ; 22 cm.
971-564-083-4
Philippine Institute for Development Studies
$ 15.00

[Tourism hold the promise of increased employment and income opportunities for Filipinos, particularly in the coastal and rural areas of the country. Yet, it is an industry built upon the most fragile of natural and cultural environments-environments wherein in the most inconsequential and innocent of human gestures can easily result in surprisingly destructive and difficult consequences on the site's resources. Through tourism, the Philippines aspires to become a stronger player in the integrated travel industry of today. Yet, the country realizes that in order to do so, it must conserve, protect, and strengthen the cultural, historical, and natural resources upon which the Philippines draws its unique competitive advantages. All these, in a manner that can be sustained for the benefit and enjoyment of future generations of Filipinos. This collection of research papers reflects the scope and complexity of sustainable tourism development. The various papers also mirror the complexity of sustainable tourism development, and they hint at the multidisciplinary approach that this mode of tourism needs to succeed. Each paper applies a different disciplinary framework to its particular tourism problem: economics, sociology, anthropology, environmental science, management science, human resources development, and others. Each paper provides a unique academic angle on sustainability and tourism.]

[This book provides a review of carefully selected literature and descriptions of valuable experiences that could lead to a policy research agenda on rural finance. Such an agenda must be drawn from a vision to promote the provision of efficient, broadly based, and sustainable financial products and services to various rural economic agents.

The policy research agenda should aim at producing research studies that will offer recommendations to policymakers on how to remove the constraints on both the demand for and supply of financial services and products in the rural areas. The proposed agenda should specifically address the issues confronting the rural economy today: asymmetric information, high transactions cost, systematic and covariant risks in agriculture and the lack of diversification in rural economies.]

[In this first book on the Ateneo de Manila during martial law, we re-live memories of the university from 1972 to 1982, shedding light on what used to be whispered stories of campus subversion and student arrests. The essays in this book deal first with the student movement in the late 1960s and early 1970s, and then with actions, conflicts, and unities within the Ateneo. Subsequent chapters cover student publications, organizations, and ideological involvement. Other sections of the book highlight the participation of faculty, administration, social development professionals, and the Jesuit community in university activism. The last chapter serves as an epilogue, linking the deepening social involvement of the Ateneo of the seventies the political struggles of the early eighties. The book also contains vignettes from former students, faculty, administrators, professionals and Jesuits who write about their memories of the period. Some relevant documents which are cited in the book and mark the era, but which are often difficult to access, have also been assembled as appendices.]

[The Trial of Andres Bonifacio: The Appeal will attempt to answer historians' (and students') questions about the execution of the Great Plebian where they should have probably been answered from the beginning-along the sidebars of the judge's bench. here, the question is before the "Supreme Court" in an imaginary appeal in which the "heirs" of Andres and Procopio Bonifacio (on the assumption that there are such petitioners) demand a "vindication," as the heirs of the supreme would probably be before the Supreme Court had the Supremo been tried, convicted, and sentenced today (assuming the death penalty were permissible.)]

[The Modern Principalia is about the Philippine ruling elite—who they are and how they evolved in history. It tells us about their economic interests as well as their lifestyles, how they acquired their wealth and built a world of their own, separating themselves from the world of the common tao. It describes their family links and their interlocking interests with other elites and foreign partners. The book also tells us about the values and behavior of the elite in politics and government, how they exploit the poverty and ignorance of the masses to win political power and what they do with that power. This is a book for the student of Philippine politics and government and the general reader who seek to understand what ails the Filipino nation today.]

[In this book, Helen Yu-Rivera challenges the conventional use of written documents in delineating the course of Philippines-Japan relations. Using editorial cartoons, the author proves that pictorial documents are potentially as rich in information as written documents. This book highlights the perspective of the popular press instead of the commonly solicited viewpoints of policymakers. More important, the author reads the editorial cartoons as symbolic language where images and text reveal more than what they signify at a cursory glance. By so doing, the author has identified, interpreted, and analyzed different levels of synthesis used to represent the Japanese in Philippine editorial cartoons of this period. While many of the symbols used were reflective of the inherent tensions in Philippines-Japan relations, factors such as conventions of the medium of cartooning, individual styles, and personal interpretation also significantly affected the occurrence, change, and continuity of the images.]

[This is a story about a people whose lives seem to have tragedy on their side. A people coping with the vestiges of colonialism-with lives marred by the scourge of their former colonial master's toxic waste. But such life's trials have also nurtured faith and hope among the people of Pampanga. That faith has found expression among the flagellants of Macabebes and hope in the enduring celebrated masterpieces of National artist Apung Enteng. Ms. Tolentino records and captures their stories and in the process, rediscovers her roots.]

[It is time to make sure that current and future generations will have the kind of stories which will be told and retold because they inspire hope, uplift the spirit, celebrate triumph over adversity, nurture a passion to be of genuine service to one's fellow humans. These are the stories of the Magsaysay laureates, Asia's contemporary heroes and heroines.

This volume, the second in the book series Great Men and Women of Asia, focuses on thirty-seven Magsaysay laureates from the countries of South Asia-Bangladesh, India, Nepal, Pakistan, and Sri Lanka. While each country has had a unique social and political history, all have deep spiritual and cultural roots in compassion and self-giving. Greatness of spirit has clearly had fertile ground in the region; the stories of our awardees reflect its direct fruits.]

[From ancient trade to modern industry, from vendors and outcasts in a separate enclave to taipans and pillars of mainstream society, the Chinese experience in the Philippines is a riveting saga of "fortune, misfortune, birth, death and rebirth." With insightful texts and expressive photographs many of them rare and never before published Tsinoy: The story of the Chinese in Philippine life presents the sweeping tale of the Chinese immigrants to the Philippines. Both history and adventure, chronicle and trivia, Tsinoy: The story of the Chinese in Philippine Life gives readers-whether Filipino, Chinese, Tsinoy or foreigner, whether scholar, student or the plain curious-a comprehensive and fascinating look at how the Chinese of ancient times came to be the Tsinoy of today.]

[This collection is composed of fifteen essays that include studies on key issues in literary studies such as canon formation, critical thinking, and cultural production. It also offers analyses of some figures that straddle culture and politics, as seen in the essays on Joseph Estrada and Fernando Poe Jr. Its overall thrust is to throw light on the specific ways in which popular literature, popular culture, and popular icons can serve as indices to the manner in which the majority of the people have responded to various realities they need to confront and make sense of in their daily lives.]

[‘Close to midnight, when the heart bows from its stem, wait for its first dew. It will drop like a gem. Catch it with your tongue. When you eat the heart of the matter, you’ll never grow hungry again.’ The myth of the banana heart inspires twelve-year old Nenita. She will appease her family’s hunger and win her mother’s love. As she cooks and eats, or dreams of cooking and eating, other love stories unfold in her street, sweltering between a volcano and a church. It is the hottest summer in the 1960s, in her small town reeling with the songs of Roy Orbison, Patsy Cline and the Beatles. Banana Heart Summer is a sensuous, poignant and quirky feast. Smoky coconut chicken in green papayas, sticky rice with sweet anise, or spicy and sorrowful peccadillos whet and challenge the palate and the heart- how to endure this delectable argument of flavors; how to find that balance between love and anger. Touching, funny, elegiac, this is a truly original book.]

[In this book of short essays, Sonni Viudez pokes youthful fun at a wide variety of topics—from beauty salons and barbershops, corporal punishment in schools, God's sense of humor, an addiction to fried chicken, the tasteless '80s, high school reunions, New Year's resolutions, to the battle of the sexes. He is at his funniest when he adopts an unrepentant, revanchist macho attitude towards women and adds mirth to the dialogue between the sexes in our times that are a-changing.]

[The Philippine Statistical Yearbook (PSY) presents time-series statistical information about the country's economic development and social environment. Statistics are disaggregated in different dimensions useful in the conduct of strategic planning, policy, program and project formulation, business/investment decision-making, research, and feasibility studies. The information is intended to meet the needs of a wide range of data users such as: government agencies / units, non-government organizations, business firms, entrepreneurs, students, international institutions, and the general public. The PSY includes a glossary of terms that provides the definition of selected statistical terminologies not widely understood by the general public.]

[Philippine Democracy Assessment: Free and Fair Elections and the Democratic Role of Political Parties critically examines two indicators of Philippine democracy, namely, elections and political parties. It looks closely at the democratic principles and values of participation, authorization, representation, accountability, transparency, responsiveness, and solidarity as these coalesce into the Philippine electoral institutions. The assessment powerfully scrutinizes these universal principles of democracy as they are embedded in a complex web of politics and culture and which make reforms challenging indeed. Democrats and scholars of democracy would find this book worthwhile.]

[The Making of the Igorot how and why American colonial rule transformed social and spatial relations across the Cordillera, creating a distinctive pan-Cordillera Igorot ethnoregional consciousness. It analyzes the ways in which establishment of Mountain Province in the early 1900s and the imposition of direct American rule served to discourage contact between highlanders and lowlanders, while reinforcing notions of high-lander connectedness.]

Quezon City : Milflores Publishing Inc., c2005

xii, 129 p. : ill. ; 23 cm.

971-828-045-6

$ 10.00

[In this first remarkable first book, Louie Cano captures in sizzling, at times poetic, prose the incessant living, loving, losing, and learning that takes place in the gay world. His post-modern eye focuses, from various distances, on the bitchboys of Malate, the de Buena dollies of Makati, the fag hags of The Courtyard, the pee men of the Murphy Streets, the cocky lesbos of Anonas, the brusko pinkies in the gyms, and much more, to create a truly fascinating world. His short essays are hilariously funny, acerbic, ironic and self-deprecatory-but never apologetic.]
