The real-world research that supports a manager's organizational vision is different in kind from the academic research that produces a thesis or scholarly article. Unfortunately, the latter is usually the only kind taught in school.

The object of real-world research is not to describe or predict, but to influence managerial behaviour. Thus the real-world researcher must develop additional skills, notably those related to creativity, persuasion and presentation.

This book, based on Dr.Katigbak's decades of experience in government, private business and academe, attempts to impart these skills, and in the process to set the researcher on the path to becoming a management guru.

Mythopoeic Poe: Understanding the masa as audience through the films of Fernando Poe, Jr. / Alfonso B.Deza
Quezon City: Great Books Publishing, 2006
335p,; 23cm
ISBN-10: 9710391186
$69.50

It is imperative that we continue the discourse of FPJ and others who have attained prominence in this time in the history of Philippine Cinema and our country. The specificities of this phenomenon are factors to be studied and subjects of interpellation and interpretation. To unravel the mystique and to understand the creation of the mystical icon that is Fernando Poe Jr. is this book's attempt.

There are very few writers who have interpreted events and happenings with a critical and cultural framework. Alfonso B. Deza brings to the reader the positioning of film as text and presents its context. Deza is very much in a position to give his interpretation of his finding, as he is an actor who has played characters in film. He is therefore familiar with the aspects of film production and is part of the environment of his study. He likewise grew up watching movies of FPJ and has therefore positioned himself as participant and at the same time researcher/writer in this scholarly pursuit. This book is rich and interesting reading for students of Film, Sociology, Anthropology, Literature, Humanities, Political Science, Communication, and the Arts. It is significant contribution to the field of Film and Film Studies.

This volume is one of the two broadly distinct but closely related books. Competing Views and Strategies on Agrarian Reform: International Perspective aims to broaden the discussion by focussing on international political, policy and theoretical debates, as well as on some empirical cases from different countries that are relevant to the study of agrarian issues in the Philippines. Competing Views and Strategies on Agrarian Reform: Philippine Perspective aims to deepen the discussion by focusing on the Philippine agrarian reform experience, but drawing lessons that are relevant to theory-building and to policy discourse and political actions in situations elsewhere. The overarching theme of the twin books is "critical thinking": conventional assumptions are interrogated, popular propositions critically examined, and new ways of questioning proposed.

These stories are about the Chinese in the Philippines and Chinese Filipinos before they were stereotyped as wealthy businessmen. In these stories we see the effects of global forces on the lives of simple people who want to live in dignity amidst racism, poverty, and persecution. Underneath the comic and painful situations, we read about how generous sacrificed their lives for the hope of a better future, how identities are formed in the crucible of national and international anxieties and how the present generation of Filipinos who are reaping the fruits of immigrant sacrifices may have too easily forgotten what it means to be children of the diaspora.

Appropriation of Colonial Broadcasting: A History of Early Radio in the Philippines, 1922-1946 / Elizabeth L Enriquez
Quezon City: The University of the Philippine Press, 2008
235p,; 23cm
Includes 1 CD-ROM
ISBN-13: 9789715425483
$ 19.95

For the first time, a construction of the history of early radio in the Philippines is attempted through the author's painstaking examination of archival records, extant publications, and private memorabilia as well as interviews of radio broadcasters during the period. Author Elizabeth L Enriquez, who includes a collection of rare music and sound recordings in the supplementary compact disk, carefully assesses radio broadcasting in the country from its birth in 1922 until the declaration of Philippine Independence from the United States in 1946-in the context of colonization and war-and proposes that Filipino broadcasters did not simply imitate the American broadcasters who introduced the cultural practice but also appropriated the medium to claim space for the expression of the local culture.

Tagalog Bestsellers of the Twentieth Century: A History of the Book in the Philippines
/ Patricia May B. Jurilla

Quezon City: Ateneo De Manila University Press, 2008

264p,; 23cm

ISBN-13: 9789715505635

$ 19.95

This pioneering work is a study on the history of the book in the Philippines, with a focus on literary publishing and Tagalog literary bestsellers of the twentieth century. It spans more than four centuries of publishing, from 1593 when the book was printed in the country to 2003 when the first nationwide survey on reading attitudes and preferences was conducted. Through its case studies of twentieth-century Philippine literary forms and texts that may be referred to as the bestselling books in their time, the work both highlights and puts in wider context the publishing, manufacturing, distribution, reception, and survival of these bestsellers, and their impact on and relation to the conditions and circumstances in the culture, society, politics and economics of the time.

This study is, in a sense, an expedition. It is an initial, painstaking effort at exploring the immense terrain of the history of the book in the Philippines, with the hope that it will leave deep enough tracks for other explorers to follow.

The Joys of Dislocation: Mindanao, Nation and Region / Patricio N Abinales

Pasig City: Anvil Publishing Inc., 2008

197p,; 22cm

ISBN-13: 9789712720109

$ 24.50

The peripatetic nature of the essays in this collection-representing over a decade of commentary on the affairs in the three zones of Mindanao, the Philippines and the Southeast Asian region-comes from being written by someone who has never settled down in any of these zones but who has always gone in and out of each of them. They reflect a peculiar position that doesn't exactly fit critics' black-and-white world of insiders and outsiders.

Dislocation has given PATRICIO N. ABINALES a chance to argue that Mindanao has always been central to the nation's formation, to think about Mindanao and the Philippines not from within but from without, and to view their stories comparatively and from a regional perspective.

Before Gringo: History of the Philippine Military 1830-1972 / Donald L Berlin

Pasig City: Anvil Publishing Inc., 2008
155p,; 22cm
ISBN-13: 9789712720932
$ 16.95

This vintage book takes issues with the popular conception that the military politicization began only under Marcos by contending that it actually has a longer history. Combining a meticulous analysis of archival data, newspaper reports, and dissertations, Berlin tracks the history of civilian-military relations since the independence, showing the extent to which the AFP, or at least its senior staff, played partisan politics to lobby, defend, and promote the institution's interests. The AFP had been in and out of the barracks as early as the first decade of the New Republic, and what Marcos did was simply to continue the practice of using it as an active collaborator. Gringo et al. were therefore not the original but mere heirs to an earlier process. This book tells where and when the military politicization began, and thus gives us readers a better understanding of the situation. This hopefully will allow us to discern the pathways that the military will carve in the near future.

Ferdinand E. Marcos: A Hero in History/ Remigio Agpalo
Philippines: Marcos Presidential Center, Inc., 2007
224p,; 23cm

ISBN-13: 9789710474011
$ 60.00

Professor Agpalo's monograph, Ferdinand E. Marcos: A Hero in History, chronicles not only the life and times of President Marcos, but more important the positive contributions, achievements and legacies of the Marcos administration especially in the promulgation of numerous beneficial and innovative decrees or laws. In retrospect, it is significant to note that of the more than 2000 laws promulgated under the Marcos regime, only less than 100 have been repeated. This is a testament to President Marcos's vision and statesmanship. Agpalo's book focuses on two important crises that President Marcos had to confront with courage and resolve: The crisis of modernization and the crisis of martial law. How Marcos successfully hurdle these twin crises is the book's center of interest.

Three decades after his first stories were published, a quarter of a century after his first novel, Hemingway in his old age writes of an "old man who fished alone in a skiff in the Gulf Stream and he had gone eighty-four days now without taking a fish." On the eighty-fifth day he goes farther out to sea than before, and then for three days and nights he battles mightily with a mighty fish. It is a monster fish, eighteen feet long, great, beautiful, indomitable, but it is finally conquered by the equally indomitable spirit of a weakening old man....

It is true that the story ends on a despondent note: the old man has lost not only his fish but even the glory of his achievement. Some tourists come and in their abysmal ignorance dismiss the enormous skeleton as that of a shark! But the old man is unaffected by the inane remarks of ignorant tourists. He is asleep and he is dreaming of lions.

Why Counting Counts: A Study of Forms of Consciousness and Problems of Language in Noli me tangere and El filibusterismo / Benedict R. O'G Anderson
Quezon City: Ateneo de Manila University Press, 2008
94p,; 23cm
ISBN-13: 9789715505550
$ 12.00

This book examines Jose Rizal's great novels, Noli me tangere and El filibusterismo, through a hitherto untried quantitative analysis of the scope and evolution of their political and social vocabulary, as well as their use of Tagalog and the lengua de Parian. Special attention is given to which characters (including the Narrator) use their terms and languages, and with what frequency. The study aims to throw new light on Rizal's changing political consciousness and use of his native language. The most important questions raised are: the shifting nature of Rizal's intended readership; the geographical location of the birth of a Filipino identity in the modern sense; the odd concealment of the Chinese mestizos combined with a growing hostility to the Chinese as an alien race, the level and ambit of the author's Chinese sophistication, and the complicated relationship between the colonial-international aspects of Spanish, the ethnic-nationalist claims of Tagalog and the emergence of a democratic cross-class lingua franca, especially in Manila.

This anthology of essays by a multidisciplinary group of authors contributes to the discourse on human emotions and efforts to understand human emotions in a cultural and social setting. It reveals perceptions of the concepts, ginhawa 'well-being', kapalaran 'destiny', and dalamhati 'anguish' of Filipinos belonging to marginalized and often ignored ethnolinguistic groups and those whose perceptions are often blurred by westernized lifestyles and an education that has buried indigenous thought. It is a contribution to the knowledge of the Filipino based on the views of Filipinos themselves. An enriching interaction of viewpoints, it also includes cross-cultural perceptions of the themes from neighboring cultures outside the Philippines. Since the essays are the result of the authors' field research, they provide authentic data that could clarify theoretical discourse. Presented in the language they were written in, the essays are in Filipino or English with abstracts in the other language.

A companion volume, Curas, catalogues the names of the parish priests included in the previous listings, with selected biographical data and sources as these are available. A User's Guide helps the researcher navigate through the volumes. Curas de Almas hopes to aid in the preparation of local histories, and to provide a more personal appreciation of the curates who guided the Filipinos in the last century of Spanish colonization.
