Art

Private Collections (Bayanihan by Carlos "Botong" Francisco)

/ Christiane L. de la Paz

Philippines : Artes de Las Filipinas, 2009

364p. ; 29cm.

ISBN 978-971-94093-0-4

$ 195.00

1, 111 artworks drawn from the art collections of 30 Filipino art collectors
30 art collections, 30 essays of formation, progression and completion

- Six surveyed and chosen book covers present a unique mode of art book presentation and is thoughtfully designed to give the book a truly unique identity
- Limited to 1000 copies; each of six covers has only 166 copies in print
- Accompanied by an interactive CD-ROM which contains trivias about each collector, artworks and portraits of artists covered in the book
- Amply illustrated with artworks, majority of these are never before seen and documented
- Packed with many references on the works of the masters, established and emerging artists
- An up-to-date and representative sample of Philippine modern and contemporary art
- Delineates that fine art is not limited to traditional paintings and sculptures; lithographs, prints, drawings, comics, photographs, glass, ceramics, potteries, embroidery and stained glass all included
- Thirty art collectors are featured individually; their brief biographies and stories of their acquisitions reveal their colorful histories, personalities, knowledge, tastes, methods in collecting and skillfully explain their reasons for collecting
- Art collectors in the book are chosen and organized into three main chapters based on the criteria set by the author
- Essays are concise and readable and are written in a way that has not been attempted in past publications and which other authors have ignored or simply passed over
- Explores the idea that an art collection is an extension of oneself
- Emphasizes that private art collecting has a beginning, middle and end stages and that it has a destiny – for the education and enjoyment of public
- An insightful reference book for art students to pursue further research about private art collecting in the Philippines

Pasig City: Anvil Publishing Inc., 2009

xvii. 128p,; 22cm

ISBN-13: 9789712722745

$ 13.50

Today, with the emergence of new, and concededly more titillating, tourist destinations, many will admit that Baguio has “fallen from grace” from its once lofty position as “Summer Capital of the Philippines.” However perhaps more than anything, this collection of works reveals the Baguio that is so much more than the handmaiden to tourism that some may falsely believe is the answer to this city’s ultimate salvation.

This collection of works provides a glimpse into that “view from within” of a place forged in consciousness that transcends boundaries of time and space.

“Beneath the Banyan Tree” is a daughter’s personal account of her family’s story through four generations and a turbulent era. The tale begins during the Spanish colonial period, and continues through the Philippine Revolution, the violent struggle and pacification by the Americans, the gradual evolution of a nation’s democratic structure interrupted by the tragedy of the Second World War, and the final triumph of independence. It is also the personal story of a family, told simply, with candor and affection.

Nine heroes that composed of a king, an archer, a Viking, a demon hunter, a knight, a queen, a monk, a sailor and a magician would find themselves embroiled in the Magic War. A war fought in the arcane mystic arts of magic, both in the past and the present. Their fate rests in a eleven-year-old boy from modern day Canberra, Australia. For the child is destined either to be the redeemer or the destroyer

Rio Alma's latest collection of poems incorporates the poet's rare intuitive understanding of relevant issues with the use of native Tagalog forms, styles and motifs. After all, these forms, styles and motifs may be retained and articulated by many contemporary Filipino artists and scholars through their respective creative and critical productions. But the employment of ancient or native poetic forms may also translate what is "being Filipino" into more fully human terms. For Rio Alma, problematizing Philippine culture and society is simultaneously aesthetic, ethical and pedagogical.

He's a late-night DJ, a smooth, relentless voice transforming loneliness into off-killer citizenship. Our post-modern, post-colonial, post-brand cereal world offers endless points of reference, but each of Lacuesta's lovingly created characters intuits a private way forward and thus traces for the reader an individual constellation of meaning. Lacuesta is not merely a DJ mixing messages from twin turntables, but also a scientist weighing inscrutable cultural and historical trade-offs in a pair of scales of subatomic sensitivity. These stories are pitch perfect.
