Most of the chapters in this volume were first presented at the Penang Outlook Forum 2009, held on 1-2 June 2009 at the E&O Hotel in Penang. A few others have been added to complement those at the conference.

At present, comprehensive and authoritative studies on Penang's current economic conditions are a rarity. This book is thus an effort To orrect that lack. Evidence does suggest that the state had not been Doing ell in the first half of the first decade of the new millennium.

Being a small state situated relatively far away from the administrative capital of Putrajaya, Penang has to be economically innovative if it is to regain its place at the forefront of Malaysian development. The relationship between the state and the federal government emains a vital matter.

"Nowhere to Hide gives a short introduction to the main causes of the crisis, and can also be a rewarding read for more advanced readers. Since he onset of the financial crisis in 2007, three major narratives have emerged to explain it. The first lays the blame squarely on economic theory.

The second narrative takes a different tack. It emphasizes the innovations, incentive structures and firm-level practices in the financial industry. The third narrative focuses on macroeconomic forces. Lim Mah-Hui and Lim Chin provide a competent account of the three major narratives. Readers Looking for a short introduction to the main causes of the crisis will do well to start with this thin book which is one of the most readable, least intimidating books on the crisis in the market today. Nowhere to Hide is a fine little book that gives a concise and compelling introduction to the crisis. It deserves a place on the bookshelves of policymakers and students of financial crises alike (Business Times).

Late industrializing countries are able to pick strategies for Economic development based on the experiences of countries that preceded them. Cambodia, Laos, Myanmar and Vietnam (the CLMV countries) were closed Off from the international community for many years, and they began to embrace a market economy at around the same time. Each bypassed the import-substitution strategy adopted by other Southeast Asian countries and began industrialization efforts with export growth funded by Foreign Direct investment.

The outcomes differed significantly owing to geographical location, government policies, and internal economic conditions. Industrialization in Late-Developing ASEAN Countries explores these differences through Case studies based on an extended research program conducted by the Institute of Developing Economies in Tokyo, which offered insights into models of economic growth, and into the trajectories followed by the four countries examined.

Climate change is a global phenomenon that is being experienced by all levels of society, regardless of race and species, and in all types of ecosystems, regardless of geographic location. It will have diverse effects on biodiversity which will directly impact on food security, water supply, and livelihood among others, especially for the poor and more vulnerable sectors of human society. More importantly, all forms of life including human society are trying their best to adapt and survive.

This book explores the two-way link between climate change And the state of biodiversity in Southeast Asia. By drawing on the Experiences and lessons shared by representatives from research and development agencies, academic institutions, donors, and other organizations; and the crosscutting issues contributed by experts, this book aims to provide insights, lessons and perspectives on how Southeast Asia is dealing with these twin concerns.

This book is invaluable to all who are interested in Assessing research gaps, identifying future research areas, drafting effective Policy agenda, and implementing critical activities at the community, national, and international levels.

1. Poverty - Indonesia

2. Indonesia - Social conditions

$ 39.90

This book consists of papers that present the findings of research done by the SMERU Research Institute in Jakarta, Indonesia. Most describe the effects on the poor of the Indonesian economic crisis of 1997-98 and the response of the Indonesian government in the form of a Social Safety Net consisting of poverty mitigation programs. With the gradual recovery of the economy after 2000, the Indonesian government began reducing subsidies for fuel products and has channelled budgetary savings into a new series of targeted social protection and poverty alleviation undertakings that include unconditional cash transfers. The effectiveness of Indonesia's poverty alleviation programs has, however, been reduced by the difficulty of targeting beneficiaries accurately because of a lack of reliable, up-to-date poverty figures. In many instances unsuitable targeting methodology has been compounded by bad governance at the local level, while the introduction of regional autonomy, accompanied by the decentralization of authority to the district level, has formed a further complicating factor.

Embedded: Intel In China: The Inside Story / Tan Wee Theng
Singapore: Marshall Cavendish Business, 2010
162p. ; 23cm.
ISBN-13: 9789812616555
$ 22.99

Intel is arguably the most successful international company, and the technology leader, in China today. Tan Wee Theng was one of the key drivers of Intel's spectacular growth in China from the mid 1990s. In this book he looks back at the challenges that were faced by the company, and discusses the critical factors for the long term relevance of Intel, and other international enterprises, in the world's fastest-growing economy.

Wee Theng's firsthand and lively account of Intel's growth in China

Includes interviews with key Chinese officials, a wide range of Intel corporate executives and frontline managers, and expert observers.

It sheds light on the complexities and idiosyncrasies of doing business in China, and highlights the opportunities that await those who shape strategies which dovetail with the country's national development agenda.

A GUIDE TO THE TOP 100 COMPANIES IN CHINA / Wenxian Zhang & Ilan Alon
Singapore: World Scientific Publishing, 2010
344p.
ISBN-13: 978-981-4291-46-0

Under the label of ³the socialist market economy with Chinese characteristics², the Chinese Government has made a firm commitment to economic reform, though still retaining tight political control. Thus, under conditions of liberal economic systems and autocratic rule, a new Capitalist system is emerging in China; its top companies are managed by private entrepreneurs, government bodies or a combination of both.

This book, presented in an easily accessible format, fills an important gap in the growing literature on China in the global economy and provides a research reference tool on China's top companies. It offers a comprehensive directory listing of the Top 100 corporations in China, thus enhancing the research potential on China for students, researchers and businesses. As a general reference guide to the Chinese economy, A Guide to the Top 100 Companies in China provides up-to-date and comprehensive coverage of the top Chinese enterprises. Corporations from Hong Kong and Taiwan that conduct significant business in China are also included.

INVESTING IN HUMAN CAPITAL FOR ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT IN CHINA / Gordon G Liu, Shufang Zhang & Zongyi Zhang
Singapore: World Scientific Publishing, 2010

424p.
ISBN: 9789812814418
$ 120.00

This book is a reflection of the current research that explores the mechanism, dynamics and evidence of the impact of human capital on economic development and social well-being in modern China. Composed of keynote speeches and selected papers from The 2005 International Conference of the Chinese Economists Society (www.china-ces.org), it tracks the latest understanding and empirical evidence of the relationships amongst health, education and economic development in China. The book presents a broad spectrum of study topics covering human capital and economic growth; demand, attainment and disparity in both education and health; and investing in human capital and the economic and social returns in China. Distinguished contributors include Robert Fogel, Michael Grossman, Daniel Hamermesh, Gregory Chow and Dean Jamison.

Since the end of the Cold War, developing a better framework to correctly recognize which direction globalization and the transition will take us has been necessary. The transition economies of China and Central Europe, in particular, hold significant implications for East Asian integration and EU enlargement, respectively. This book examines the processes of transition, regional development and globalization, focusing on China and Central Europe, and seeks to identify a new and stable international framework with improved outcomes for all.

Divided into three parts, the book first analyzes several key economic issues concerning transition in China and Central Europe; it then examines these issues from the viewpoint of international relations; finally, it considers potential future directions for China, Japan, US and EU. It therefore constitutes an important contribution to our understanding of the ongoing process of globalization and ways to improve Sino-Japanese-EU-American-Central European economic relations.

This book provides critical insight into governmental policies that relate to gender, environment and natural resources management in different regions and places in Africa and Asia. It contributes to the gender and environmental discourse, which has been uppermost in the work of the contributors. The chapters highlight environmental changes from gender perspectives, complexities and critical re-thinking on eco-feminism and gender, climate change, gender relations and the conservation of the environment, access to resources and biomass energy and environmental management. A remarkable feature of the book is that it provides both theoretical dimensions and empirical research on the issues. It allows non-experts to assess and understand the relation between the state and the environment and give users information they need to understand gender and environmental issues from across different continents and cultures.

There is a benevolent school of thought that the flame of anti-corruption never died but merely quivered perilously low in some administrations. There is, on the other hand, a school of thought that most administrations in the past snipped ineffectually at corruption. Perhaps, the point of agreement between these two schools of thought is the suggestion that the practical battle against corruption has gathered momentum and is rising to fever heat. The laws of warfare in this war against corruptions are, however of crucial concern to legal scholars and commentators. Yet the legal arguments are often seen as academic exercises.

For the masses living in abject and abysmal poverty, there is wealth everywhere but not a drop to drink. For them, it is a crime against their raison d'être; it is a crime against humanity. That is the gist of this work: the war on corruption, the laws of warfare, and the poverty-stricken masses who are invariably non-combatants but who are brazenly and ostentatiously denied of their natural, God-given endowment by extremely corrupt and perverse public officers.

Africa speaks up on Climate Change is an appeal to political actors worldwide to care for the threat climate change poses to Africa. Its aim is to create awareness that these political actors have to act immediately. Already, droughts, floods, desertification and other effects of Climate Change are threatening both nature and livelihoods. The appeal is also addressing the African public: Only the people can apply the Necessary pressure to make the necessary changes.
