Anthology of Malaysian & Singaporean Poems

$ 20.00

From the Window of this Epoch is a bilingual anthology of 100 poems by 73 Malaysian and Singaporean poets. The theme of this anthology is 'relationship and humanity', but one which gives rise to the poets' anxieties and warnings of a societal crisis in the wake of globalization, as well as their ideas and views on current events in both countries from a poetic angle.

The aim of this Malaysian-Singaporean anthology is to foster closer ties between the poets of both countries.

3. Life skills – Anecdotes
4. Self realization – Anecdotes

$ 10.00

In 2005, Rica Bolipata-Santos lost her father, suffered from her son's worsening condition, and discovered salvation in writing. In 2007, she won the Madrigal-Gonzalez Best First Book Award for her first collection of essays. According to the judges, her "provocative and well-shaped essays" were "luminous, little narratives."

In Lost and Found, Bolipata-Santos continues travelling the terrain of the mundane and domestic, still unafraid to find gravitas in the tiniest of experiences. In these twenty-six articles she wrote from 2005-2009 for the Philippine Star, Bolipata-Santos trains her eye on everyday things, using words to transform the ordinary into something revelatory.

News of the Shaman: Four Novellas of Horror / Karl R. De Mesa
Pasay City: Visprint, Inc., 2010
183p. ; 23cm.

ISBN-13: 9789719456933

$ 12.00

The Shaman transcends the material through a combination of belief, drugs, and quite madness. Is that then what De Mesa intends? To entice us towards a similar transcendence? Not necessarily through narcotics and ritual, but rather through text, through provocation, through a consistent and insistent displacement, if not utter disregard, to what a reader might want to feel or think. In these works there is a strong, forceful hand, similar to that of a shaman putting one into a trance. The words are ones that we know, ones that we have heard, and indeed the worlds that are portrayed are not so different from our own. And yet, when these things mix, the words, the worlds, and the strong hand, the guiding voice behind these stories, we are driven to places that are strikingly different and at times difficult to endure but at the same time are places that we have been, or have almost been in, or could imaginably go to.

Meet Mia, a shy homebody who hasn't traveled anywhere in the country (let alone outside of it). After she is accosted by a fortune-teller who says she sees a boy in her future, Mia meets Leo. Leo who makes her heart flutter, Leo with whom she surprisingly feels at ease, Leo who lives in Bangkok.

All of a sudden, Mia finds herself getting on a plane to answer the question tugging at her heart ever since her fortune-teller encounter: Could Leo be The One?

After hours of chatting and sending numerous e-mail messages, Mia has to see him face to face or she'll never know the truth. But the very day she arrives in Bangkok, she finds out that Leo had to live for Bali. What message does that send her? And more importantly, what is she to do?

Join Mia as she takes an unexpected tour of Bangkok, Bali, and Vietnam to find her answers and hopefully, true love.

$ 19.50

This book actually wrote itself, as the author states. It is a personal account that chronicles his wife's bout with aneurysm and its many life-threatening complications, which happened in India on November 29, 2008. This book includes a complete compilation of the daily email updates written by the author while marooned in India for 88 days, caring for his wife in the ICU of the Hospital. The daily updates reached thousands of recipients via an 'e-group," which evolved into a prayer community that sought a miracle for his wife. "It is to the prayers of these people who received the daily updates that we attribute Margie's miraculous recovery," says the author.
