LOST KINGDOMS : Hindu-Buddhist Sculpture of Early Southeast Asia / John Guy
River books Co. Ltd., Bangkok 2014

360 ill. Including 304 in full color

$ 70.00 / HB

From the fifth to the eighth century, a series of kingdoms emerged in Southeast Asia whose rulers embraced Hinduism and Buddhism, two major religions received from India. Yet, until recently, little was known about these enigmatic early societies. Lost Kingdoms, the first publication to use sculpture as a lens through which to explore this formative period of Southeast Asian history, is a groundbreaking scholarly contribution. While taking a fresh approach to the study of the early cultures of Cambodia, Indonesia, Malaysia, Myanmar, Thailand, and Vietnam, it also considers the individuals sculptures and architectural elements presented here – more than 170 works in all – in terms of their undeniable aesthetic accomplishment. For these are objects of rare and singular beauty as well as keys to understanding an essential phase of Southeast Asia's past.

Spectacular photographs shot on location fill the pages, while texts by the most prominent scholars in the field address the key themes that unite many of the objects and provide important contextual background. Rich in art-historical, cultural, and political insights, Lost Kingdoms is both a watershed study of Southeast Asia's cultural legacy and a breathtaking introduction to a largely unknown tradition of early Hindu-Buddhist art.

Royal Porcelain from Siam : Unpacking the Ring Collection / Edited by Anne Håbu and Dawn F. Rooney

River books Co. Ltd., Bangkok 2014

More than one hundred years ago, several wooden chests filled with colorful porcelain arrived in Oslo, after a long sea voyage from Bangkok. The Norwegian sea captain Theodor Ring had acquired a sizable collection of Bencharong porcelain during his service in the Royal Siamese Navy. In 1904 Ring donated 250 pieces to two museums in the Norwegian capital. After being forgotten for generations, these and other treasures from King Chulalongkorn's Thailand have finally been unpacked again.

Bencharong porcelain, with its lavish decorations of flowers and figures with roots in Indian mythology, was custom-made in China for the Royal Court of Siam. In this book, international experts examine the Ring Collection in light of new research, and bring into focus the time and environment in which it originated. Richly illustrated, Royal Porcelain from Siam reveals the beauty of a distinguished Thai contribution to the world history of ceramics.

Sazigyo: Burmese Manuscript Binding Tapes: Woven Miniatures of Buddhist Art /

Silkworm Books, Thailand 2014

Sazigyo are Burmese tablet-woven bands that were used to bind palm-leaf manuscripts. In these wonderful weaves, brightly colored lines of elegant script are interspersed with fascinating, miniature pictures of animals and other objects. The woven bands were commissioned by Buddhist donors gifting a scriptural manuscript to a monastery to make spiritual merit in order to attain a better rebirth and ultimately nirvana. The texts follow traditional conventions: they invoke celestial powers, identify the donors, and summon witnesses to share the donors' merit.

This richly illustrated book presents an unfamiliar and specialized subject to a wide readership. Nine hundred beautiful illustrations show parts of over two hundred sazigyo found in museums and private collections in Britain, Southeast Asia, and throughout the world. In addition, more than two hundred excerpts of sazigyo texts are quoted, and twenty are quoted in full in English translation.

The Buddha taught that impermanence is a fact of life. Nothing endures. The art of weaving sazigyo never recovered from the impact of the printed book and by the 1970s had all but vanished. This book is a posthumous celebration of a craft that is no more, and a tribute to the skill and flair of these brilliant sazigyo weavers.
