Breakthrough: Corporate South Africa in a Green Economy / Godwell Nhamo. Ed
AISA, South Africa 2014

346p.;

9780798304566

$ 50.00 / HB

This book addresses hot issues pertaining to the manner in which corporate South Africa has engaged the emerging green global economy. Firstly, the book profiles the green and low carbon economy landscape in South Africa and interfaces it with global trends. This way, the book aligns very well in terms of the Rio+20 outcomes on The Future We Want that fully embraces the green global economy in the context of sustainable development and poverty eradication. The rest of the chapters in the book profile breakthroughs from selected companies.

Executive salaries - Who should get a say on pay? / Debbie Collier, Kaylan Massie
Jacana Media, South Africa 2014

322p.;

9781431410125

$ 37.70 / HB

Can regulation lead to transformation? In 2006, Crotty and Bonorchis published a study of executive pay across 50 of South Africa's largest and most influential listed companies. In their study, titled Executive pay in South Africa - Who gets what and why, the authors revealed that in 2005, on average, the chief executives of these companies got paid more than R15 million a year, more than 700 times the minimum wage in certain industries. The authors predicted that without government intervention, executive packages would continue to skyrocket. In Executive salaries: Who should get a say on pay? the chief executive pay-packages of the companies studied in 2006 are re-examined. Unfortunately, the predictions made in 2006 have come true: despite affirmative action measures and changes to corporate governance requirements, executive salaries have continued to increase dramatically. South Africa's widening income inequality and its history of racism, poverty and social unrest demand that something be done to reverse this trend. Social cohesion cannot be achieved when inequality remains rampant. But what will it take for companies to rein in excessive executive salaries? Who must be given a say on pay in order to ensure that the directors responsible for setting pay take into account more than just the interests of executives? Should shareholders, employees, the tax man or the remaining 99% of society have a say on what the 1% are being paid? Or is change only possible if a more fundamental shift in attitudes is achieved? This book addresses these pressing issues and considers possible mechanisms to rein in excessive executive pay. From modifying corporate governance standards and the tax code to properly enforcing current labour legislation, there are numerous avenues that may ameliorate the wage gap. Legislative amendments aimed at encouraging activist shareholders and empowering the workforce could put South Africa on the road to recovery. Without these interventions, South Africa will continue on a path of instability and unrest, while the rich get richer and the poor become poorer.

Lessons from the Boot of a Car - For Entrepreneurship And For Life / Reg Lascaris
The Penguin Group (SA), South Africa 2013

208p.;

9780143538509

$ 34.50 / HB

Reg Lascaris, one of South Africa's most celebrated marketers, literally started out from the boot of an old car. The road leading from the one point to the other has been long, uneven and often difficult, but in one respect it never failed: there was always a lesson to be learnt. Lascaris, together with his partner John Hunt, sparked not only some of the most iconic ad campaigns in the world, but the transformation of the South African advertising industry into a twenty-first century powerhouse.

Entrepreneurship- A South African Perspective / G. Nieman & C Nieuwenhuizen
Van Schaik Publishers, South Africa 2014

9780627031366

$ 60.00 / HB

Entrepreneurship – a South African perspective provides an overview of entrepreneurship and important related topics in the field of entrepreneurship. In addition it is a guide to becoming a successful entrepreneur. It describes and illustrates new venture creation within a South African context: the start-up process, the growth stages and the challenges in the maturity phase of the business. It provides exercises, activities and numerous case studies based on the latest research in South Africa.

In this third edition of Entrepreneurship all the chapters have been updated, and some chapters, including those on corporate entrepreneurship, e-business and the resource requirements of legal and related aspects, have been substantially revised. To provide a more practical context, profiles of typical entrepreneurs are also included.

The strategic management process - A South African perspective / K. Lazenby
Van Schaik Publishers, South Africa 2014

9780627031250

$ 60.00 / HB

Today it is clear to managers and entrepreneurs that the business environment can change at any given time. Strategic management is an important and ongoing process of formulating and implementing strategies that help an organisation to position itself optimally and so maintain a competitive advantage that results in profit. It creates harmony between any organisation, big or small, and its environment. All stakeholders are affected by strategic decisions. In the South African context, strategic management is crucial for all profit-seeking as well as non-profit-seeking organisations as a result of an ever-changing, turbulent and competitive environment. It is therefore important for students and practitioners of management at every level and in every organisation to understand the vital role of strategic management in the life of an organisation. The strategic management process: a South African perspective is a new South African handbook with a fresh and exciting perspective. Its four parts follow an understandable and practical approach, making use of numerous figures and "strategy in action" cases to support the theory. The strategic management process: a South African perspective should prove invaluable both to students in strategic management and to organisations, from corporate and public companies with management training programmes, to small business ventures that are trying to gain a competitive advantage in a cut-throat environment. The editor, Kobus Lazenby, is an associate professor in the Department of Business Management at the University of the Free State, specialising in strategic management and project management. The contributors lecture in strategic management at South African universities.

Managing human capital in the public sector / DM Mello
Van Schaik Publishers, South Africa 2014

9780627030680

$ 46.00 / HB

Governments of today are under increasing pressure to deliver more and better services within the constraints of limited resources. Employees are central to service delivery and the calibre of those appointed in a public institution is often evident in the quality of services rendered and the number of complaints received. Managing human capital in the public sector encompasses all activities starting from the recruitment of staff to the final termination of services. Managing human capital in the public sector is rooted in theory while using case studies to bring the learning experience closer to a public sector work environment. It supports a problem-based learning approach and prepares graduates to perform duties in a human capital environment with minimal on-the-job training.

The End of the Developmental State? / Ed. Williams, Michelle
University of Kwazulu Natal Press, South Africa 2014

$ 32.00 / HB

This book brings together leading scholars of development to assess the current status of the 'developmental state' in several developing and transitional economies of South Korea, Taiwan, Ireland, the United Kingdom, China, South Africa, Brazil and India. Has the concept of the developmental state become outmoded? These authors would suggest not. However, they do argue that the historical trajectories of developmental states in Asia, Latin America, Africa and Europe suggest all too clearly that the concept must be re-examined critically and creatively.

The quality of education is pivotal for the production of human capital and this cannot be compromised by failing to refocus on the quality of education offered in schools. The inputs in the system such as trained and motivated teachers, buildings and classrooms including sanitation, clean water, instructional material such as textbooks, as well as strong leadership with vision to steer the winds of change are important in providing the desired outcomes.

Life orientation for South African teachers / M. Nel

Van Schaik Publishers, South Africa 2014

9780627031199

$ 50.00 / HB

Life Orientation in the Senior and Further Education and Training phases (called Life Skills in the Intermediate Phase) is a compulsory school subject, the purpose of which is to empower learners to achieve their full physical, intellectual, personal, emotional and social potential. It is thus obvious that it is a crucial subject to develop and support learners to become fully functional individuals and responsible citizens of a democratic society, able to cope with life and all the challenges it presents. Life orientation for South African teachers is a comprehensive textbook on the subject of Life Orientation as stated in the curriculum policy documents. Life orientation for South African teachers provides educators with in-depth knowledge and teaching skills to deal with the wide variety of themes within the subject. There are case studies, reflective questions and activity boxes to assist with practical application of the topics covered in each chapter.

Fields of Desire: Poverty and Policy in Laos

Holly High

In this important new book, High argues that poverty reduction policies are formulated and implemented in fields of desire. Drawing on psychoanalytic understandings of desire, she shows that such programs circulate around the question of what is lacking. Far from rational responses to measures of need, then, the politics of poverty are unconscious, culturally expressed, mutually contradictory, and sometimes contrary to self-interests.

Based on long-term fieldwork in a Lao village that has been the subject of multiple poverty reduction and development programs, High's account looks at implementation on the ground. While these efforts were laudable in their aims of reducing poverty, they often failed to achieve their objectives. Local people received them with suspicion and disillusionment. Nevertheless, poverty reduction policies continued to be renewed by planners and even desired locally. High relates this to the force of aspirations among rural Lao, ambivalent understandings of power and "post-rebellious" moment in contemporary Laos.
