In this book Klaus Fiedler offers a candid critique of religious faith healing claims - a critique that extends to the Voluntary Male Medical Circumcision Campaign (VMMCC). The book reveals the lack of substantive evidence to back such healing claims and the contradiction between the VMMCC claims and the consequences of those claims in sexual health and practice.

Over a century much of Africa south of the Sahara embraced the Christian religion. Malawi, where 80% of the population identify as Christian is no exception, nor are the Ngonde at its northern border with Tanzania. While it is difficult to find someone who does not claim to be a Christian, African traditional religion is by no means dead and often practiced by many. While the two religions are not "mixed", but they are both realities in many a Christians life, though realities of a different kind. The author explores the intricate and often varied relationship between the two and considers factors which increase or decrease dual religiosity

In 2014 the Fourth International Congress of Ethnic Chinese Biblical Scholars was held at the Chinese University of Hong Kong, with 96 scholars from Hong Kong, Taiwan, Indonesia, the Philippines, Italy, France etc. This conference sought to recognize and encourage biblical scholarship among ethnic Chinese biblical scholars, to create a lively network of ethnic Chinese scholars from Asia and in the Diaspora, and to identify and nurture the next generation of ethnic Chinese biblical scholars. This collection of 26 essays from the conference showcases the varieties of approaches and insights offered by ethnic biblical scholars and is divided into three parts: Old Testament, New Testament, and Comparative Studies. Asian biblical scholarship is traditionally led by male scholars, but we are glad and proud to see that in this volume 14 essays are written by female scholars, indicating a balanced contribution from both genders.
