L'histoire du mouvement syndical sénégalais dans l'enseignement en général est ancienne (depuis 1937), mais relativement récente dans le secteur de l'enseignement supérieur (depuis la décennie 70). Né le 27 avril 1985, à l'Université de Dakar, le Syndicat Autonome des Enseignants du Supérieur (SAES) est le fruit de la vision de quelques enseignants du Syndicat Unique et Démocratique des Enseignants du Sénégal (SUDES) qui ont estimé, d'une part, que leurs préoccupations n'étaient pas prises en compte dans les plateformes revendicatives, d'autre part, que le SUDES était traversé par des querelles internes et de leadership.

Son irruption dans l'espace universitaire est donc venue changer le peu d'intérêt que les dirigeants sénégalais eurent, de l'indépendance survenue en 1960 jusqu'au milieu de la décennie 80, pour la question de l'enseignement supérieur. Le SAES est présent aujourd'hui dans les cinq universités du Sénégal où il totalise 60,5 % des enseignants-chercheurs. Cette monographie basée sur des données historiques et sociologiques permet d'avoir d'amples informations sur l'un des syndicats les mieux structurés de l'enseignement supérieur en Afrique.

Homosexuality is a cross-cutting challenge to Malawian society with theological, socio-cultural, economic, legal, political, and human rights implications. This book argues that the solution to the homosexuality debate in Malawi does not lie in either the criminalization or decriminalization of homosexuality; neither does it lie in homophobia nor heterophobia. However, the solution to the homosexuality debate lies in achieving a harmonious co-existence of both heterosexuals and homosexuals by practicing mutual tolerance. The book concludes by suggesting various activities to be taken by: The Government of Malawi; Gay Rights Activists; Religious Leaders; Traditional Leaders; and Malawian Society to ensure the aforementioned tolerance and understanding is encouraged.

Migration has assumed growing significance in the global development agenda as its potential for economic and social development is increasingly acknowledged. Within the Africa context, perceptions of migration as a negative phenomenon have shifted to recognition of its central role to Africa's transformation. Despite this shift, emerging migration dynamics have not been adequately contextualized and conceptualized, making it difficult to integrate migration into development planning processes. This book attempts to fill the gaps in migration knowledge production, particularly from the perspectives of researchers in the global south and more specifically from Ghana. The chapters provide multi disciplinary perspectives in the contemporary migration landscape in Ghana and Africa. Rather than focus on migration as a problem to be solved, the chapters explore migration as an intrinsic part of the broader processes of structural change in Ghana, which could create opportunities for development if properly harnessed. This reader is an essential resource for migration and development researchers, students, policy makers, practitioners and others interested in the field of development.

Seventy percent of the global burden of mental disorders is located in low and middle income countries (LMIC), including sub-Saharan Africa (SSA). However, in Africa, only 0.62% of the national health budget is allocated to mental health compared to a global median of 2.8% and 5% in Europe. The government is the source of funding in 62%of patients with severe mental disorder in the World Health Organisation (WHO), Africa Region, the lowest of all the WHO regions, and lower compared to a global median of 79%. This is compounded by poor resources, with mental health outpatient facilities in WHO Africa Region being less than 10% of the global median. To address these problems, the WHO launched its Mental Health Action Gap Programme (mhGAP) in 2008, to scale-up mental health services in low and middle income countries (LMIC). The book is directed to all policy makers in sub-Saharan Africa to aid decision making about the urgent need for sustainable and relevant mental health care strategies, and the important areas that need priority. The book should be helpful to local and international researchers in formulating research questions relevant to the African continent and it will be of interest to medical practitioners and students in the region as adjunct to standard text books.
